Relief Plans Of President Are Assailed By Robinson

Indiana Senator Asserts "Mad Spending" Is Grave Threat.

Democratic Leader Rises to Defense

Reed Springs Surprise, Introducing Veterans' Relief Measure.

By Franklin Waltman, Jr.

Contentions by Senator Arthur Robinson, (Republican), Indiana, that President Rosevelt's message to Congress was nothing more than "glittering generalities" and that his "mad spending" was dragging the country to the verge of bankruptcy yesterday brough Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas to his feet with a spirited defense of the Administration.

For more than two hours the red-headed team of Robinson twins—Democratic and Republican—held the Senate floor in a warm, and sometimes bitter, discussion of Roosevelt policies and the Administration's budget with its $7,000,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year.

They surrendered the floor to another red-heade, Senator Huey P. said he had no criticism to make of Long, (Democrat), Louisiana, who the amount of expenditures so long as they went to "feed the hungry and clothe the naked," but he urged the Administration should adopt his plan for stopping deficits and getting the revenue to meet these expenditures.

Speaks of Redistribution.

Invoking in his support the words of the Bible, Plato, Daniel Webster, Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Senator Long reiterated his now well-advertised scheme to redistribute wealth by heavy and, on the larger sums confiscatory, taxes on incomes, estates and inheritances.

Not only would the self-styled Louisiana "kingfish" expand the present relief programs until every hungry and ill-clother person was provided for, but he would enact at once a Federal old-age pension law which would provide a monthly payment of $30 to every person beyond the age of 60 years—unless they had a substantial income.

Senator Long said he could not understand the attitude of the Administration in maintaining indifference to his proposal at a time when the National debt was rapidly mounting, because, as he said, his plan would turn $15,000,000,000 annually into the Treasury.

In attacking the Administration

Violence Gains In Milk Strike

Slugging, Raids, Wrecked Trucks Mark Chicago Sabotage Fight.

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Amid violence and sabotage that extended for 100 miles around the city, efforts were under way tonight to settle a farmers' selling strike that had reduced milk shipments into Chicago to meager supplies for infants and hospitals.

Thousands of gallons of milk were dumped during the day. Five trucks making deliveries were pushed into Chicago River and another burned. Pickets set up effective blockades on every highway over which milk might be shipped. There were sluggings and raids on milk depots.

Dairy operators and farmers' representatives conferred for hours in Chicago, but it appeared certain the strike would continue for one more day at least.

Two attempts were made to halt shipments of milk by rail, in one of which obstructions were placed on the rails in Kenosha County, and there was one attempt to flag down a train with red flares near Waukegan, Ill.

A raid by 40 men on a small cash-and-carry dairy in suburban Niles Center was another instance of violence. The raiders dumped 270 gallons of milk, terrified the manager and fled.

Santa Ana, Calif., Jan. 8 (AP).—Violence flared in the southern California milk strike today as Lawrence Palmer, 31, of Los Angeles, was shot in the hands and legs in driving away from a Santa Ana dairy.

Search for Son Fails; Mother's Illness Worse

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 8 (AP).—Concern was expressed tonight by friends over the condition of Mrs. H. Douglas Johnson, for whose son, H. Douglas Johnson, jr., a Nation-wide search has been carried on for a week.

Mrs. Johnson has been ill since her son's disappearance last Tuesday and lack of sleep while she has awaited news of the boy has made her condition more serious.

Roosevelt Lifts Curb On Agency Finances

Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee (left), shown in conference yesterday with Lewis W. Douglas, director of the budget.

Liftnig restrictions which were holding up public works contracts, President Roosevelt rescinded his Executive Order of last week which placed under the critical scrutiny of Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas all estimates of emergency expenditures.

In its place he issued another order requiring weekly reports covering all allocations, expenditures and issues of securities, so that the Budget Director may keep compilations and "from time to time make such recommendations thereon to the President as he may deem advisable."

Unaffected is an order under which all emergency accounts are brought under the keen inspection of Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, who will exercise the same authority over the receipts and disbursements of the recovery agencies he now holds over regular departmental operations.

The original order empowering Director Douglas to approve emergency expenses went further than

Borah Urges U. S. to Steer Lone Course

Nation Is Warned Against Inviting Contempt by Meddling Abroad.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Senator Borah tonight reiterated his faith in the foreign policy of Washington and Jefferson and defied his critics to apply the term "isolation" to an aloof concentration upon America's own problems.

"It is not isolation, it is freedom of action," he said addressing the Council on Foreign Relations. "It is independence of judgment. It is not isolation, it is free government—There can be no such thing as free government if the people thereof are not free to remain aloof or to take part in foreign wars.

"People who have bartered away or surrendered their right to remain neutral in war have surrendered their right to govern. In matters of trade and commerce we have never been isolationists and never will be. In matters of finance, unfortunately, we have not been isolationists, and probably never will be.

Dangers of Commitment.

"When earthquake and famine, or whatever brings human suffering visit any part of the human race, we have not been isolationists, and never will be.

"But in all matters political, in all commitments of any nature or kind which encroach in the slightest upon the free and unembarrassed action of our people or which circumscribe their discretion or judgment, we have been free, we

Admiral Grayson Undergoes Knife

Rochester, Minn., Jan. 8 (AP).—Dr. E. Starr Judd, of the Mayo Clinic, late today said he believed Admiral Carey Grayson of Washington, D. C., would "react favorably" to an operation for kidney tumor performed earlier in the day.

Admiral Grayson, personal physician to President Woodrow Wilson, was accompanied here by Mrs. Grayson and Bernard M. Baruch, New York.

In a statement tonight, Mr. Baruch said Rear Admiral Grayson underwent a "very difficult and serious operation for removal of a large tumor on his right kidney. The results will not be known for several days."

City Liquor Bill May Pass House Today

Committee Alters Draft; Let Wine in "Taverns;" Restrict Credit Sale.

Passage of a District liquor law by the House is expected today.

A measure providing for a licensing system and sale of liquor by the drink in hotels, restaurants, and clubs was favorably reported by the District committee yesterday and unanimous consent to take the bill up today was given at the request of Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman.

Report of the committee was made after it had voted down a proposal by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, to substitute for the Commissioners' bill the stringent dispensary bill sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

The Smith bill would have permitted sale of beer and light wines in hotels and restaurants and clubs but would have prohibited drinking of stronger liquors in public and limited their sale to Government dispensaries.

Dissenters Avoid Delay.

Defeat of the Smith proposal was followed by an equally quick disapproval of the even stricter dispensary measure sponsored by Dr. Frank W. Biuck, of the Federal Dispensary Tax Reduction League.

True to their word, opponents of the Commissioners' bill made no effort to delay committee action and once their dispensary proposals were defeated the committee rushed through the measure.

Light wines were put in the same category with beer and may be sold

Rosenwald Extortion Plotter Sent to Prison

Philadelphia, Jan. 8 (AP).—William F. Schultze, 35, milk wagon driver, accused of attempting to extort $30,000 from Lessing J. Rosenwald, millionaire philanthropist, under threat of bodily harm, was convicted today and sentenced from five to 15 years in Eastern State Penitentiary.

Schultze was arrested December 23 when he walked into a trap set by detectives for the writer of three threatening letters received by Rosenwald, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co.

'The Song Is Ended' for Vallees But the Melody Doesn't Linger

Los Angeles, Jan. 8 (AP).—A separate maintenance action charging Rudy Vallee with being "intimate on numerous occasions" with Alice Faye, movie actress, and two "Jane Does" was filed against the singer and orchestra leader today by Fay Webb Vallee.

The complaint, sealed at first, was ordered opened at the insistence of the singer and orchestra leader.

It said that Mrs. Vallee, daughter of the Santa Monica police chief, was in ill health, suffering from ailments with which "the defendant is familiar," and for which she is unable to pay medical bills.

Mrs. Vallee estimated Vallee's income at $50,000 a month and asserted that she was encouraged by him in an expensive standard of living.

The nature of the action was made public a short time after Vallee, in his dressing room at a film studio, threatened sensational disclosures "if everything has to be brought out."

The suit followed several legal maneuvers, involving the Vallee matrimonial shipwreck, including a case in New York in which the wife sought to restrain him from obtaining a Mexican divorce.

Longer Week In Auto Code Authorized

Johnson Approves First Big Change in NRA Minimum Hours.

Moye Needed to Avoid Labor Trek to Detroit, Roosevelt Told.

The first break of a major industry from minimum working hour provisions of NRA occurred yesterday when the automobile code was changed to permit a 40-hour work week instead of a 35-hour week.

Gen. Johnson explained in a report to President Roosevelt that it was necessary to increase working hours in the industry because of increased production.

There was no hint that any other consideration brought about the change. The automobile code originally expired January 1. Then it was extended without a change change until September 1. The change yesterday came without warning or without any prior indication that a change was being considered.

Johnson Explains.

The automobile code was subject to much controversy when it was adopted and one of the questions that caused the greatest dispute was that of hours. It was recalled in connection with the change in hours that the Ford Motor Co., which did not sign the code, but which has been conforming to its provisions, laid off thousands of men temporarily with the explanation that this was necessar yto conform with the 35-hour provision.

"The contemplated increase in automobile production in the spring of 1934," Gen. Johnson told the President, "would under the oresent average of 35 hours per week probably result in again attracting a considerable number of men to Detroit and other automobile manufacturing centers who would be without jobs after the spring period or large production had passed."

Points to Employment Gains.

Johnson pointed out that the last complete report of the Automobile Chamber of Comerce showed hat 150,756 persons were employed in the industry in September, 1933, as compared with 73,411 in September, 1932. There were 194,274 working in September, 1929, compared with 111,996 in September, 1930, and 113,183 in September, 1931.

"These figures indicate," Johnson said, "that there were 77,345 more workers in employment in September of 1933 than in September of 1932, or an increase of approximately 105 per cent, and an increase of 38,760 workers over the same month in 1930, or an increase of approximately 34 per cent.

"While the employment level of 1929 has not been reached, it is my opinion that satisfactory absorption of labor should not be measured by employment in that year, as there was a substantial percentage of floating workers brought to this industry from their normal pursuits. Many, if not most of whom, it is my understanding, have since returned to their former homes.

Cut in Output Cited.

"In addition, the decrease in production must be considered, as indicated by the fact that the production in September, 1929, was 257,517 vehicles as compared with 144,367 in September, 1933, a decrease of 43 per cent, while employment in September, 1933, was only 22 per cent below that of September, 1929.

"The contemplated increase in automobile purchases in the spring of 1934 would, under the present average of 35 hours per week, probably result in again attracting a considerable number of men to Detroit and other manufacturing centers, who would be without jobs after the spring period of large production had passed."

When the code was adopted last September it was understood that upon its expiration on January 1, the industry would be entitled to reconsideration of the maximum hours provision.

Suit Pact Spurned By Mrs. Webster

Repudiates Agreement Her Attorneys Drew Up.

New York, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Mrs. Gertrude Devine Webster today repudiated an agreement made on her behalf by which she was to receive $30,000 a year from her former husband, William M. Ritter, Washington lumber magnate.

A jury, trying Mrs. Webster's suit against Ritter, was dismissed Friday when her attorneys announced the settlement.

Formal papers were to be signed today, but Mrs. Webster told Supreme Court Justice Aaron Steuer she was not satisfied with the amount. Justice Steuer adjourned the case.

Mrs. Breck, Steel Man's Daughter, Sues Mate

Reno, Nev., Jan. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Dorothy Weir Breck, daughter of E. T. Weir, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corporation, filed suit for divorce from George D. Breck here today.

Mrs. Breck charged cruelty. The couple were married in New York April 28, 1923. Terms of a property settlement were not revealed.

Col. Cooper Is Indicted In Bank Case

Charges of Fraud Also Name Warren in $400,000 Loss.

Banker, Denied Hearing by Probers, Posts $10,000 Bond.

Winding up a whirlwind investigation of affairs of the Commercial National Bank, the District Grand Jury yesterday returned an eight-page indictment charging Col. Wade H. Cooper, president, and Bates Warren, a member of the board and the bank's general counsel, with conspiring to misapply $400,000 of the banks funds.

Even as the grand jury was preparing the final phases of its report, Col. Cooper besieged its room in a vain attempt to get a hearing. He did succeed in passing through to the jury a letter in which he claimed he had been the victim of a "frame up" but the jury refused to permit him to make a statement.

Col. Cooper later sought return of the letter. He was informed that it had been made a part of the grand jury's records, and could not be returned.

A few minutes after the indictment was filed in open court, Cooper posted a $10,000 bond, furnished by Milton Kronheim, a professional bondsman, and left the court house. Warren later posted a similar bond.

37 Overt Acts Listed.

The indictment lists 37 "overt acts" which allegedly made up the conspiracy. Together the counts list a total of slightly more than $400,000, though the preamble of the indictment charges exactly $400,000.

Two general classifications were listed in the indictment. The first class related to the paying out of $105,000 in dividends on the stock of the Continental Trust Co., which was absorbed in 1930 by the Commercial, while the second dealt with alleged irregular loans totaling $300,000.

Charging that Col. Cooper and Warren, as officers of the Commercial, "had control, direction and management over its business and affairs and of its money, funds and credits," the indictment avers that they were thus "enabled to accomplish the unlawful conspiracy."

The time of the commission of the so-called irregularities extended from January 18, 1930, to February 27, 1933, just prior to the March banking holiday.

During that time, it was charged, "they, with intent to injure and defraud said bank, unlawfully, corruptly and feloniously did conspire, combine, confederate and agree together and with others unknown to the grand jury."

Charge Both Benefitted.

Prior to listing the overt acts the jury stated that the two men credited to an account of the Continental Trust Co. $105,000 which was paid out as dividends. It then pointed out that as "owners of large numbers of shares of stock in the French Lower U. S. Trade Bar

300 Percent Increase Is Given; Britain Gets Liquor Raise.

Paris, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—The French Government today announced quotas on United States imports for the first quarter of 1934 had been increased by 300 per cent.

This restored the 75 per cent quota reduction of January 1 and makes the 1934 quota the same as that of the past year.

The increase excludes apples, pears, pork and salted meats, already fixed under the recent wine agreement.

The arrangement is particularly beneficial to the automobile industry, howover, allowing importation of approximately 125 motor cars in the first three mnths, as compared with only 30, as announced on January 1.

Britain Makes Trade.

Great Britain and the United States decided yesterday upon an arrangement where by $1,000,000 worth of American pork products in adition to the regular quota will be admitted to Great Britain and the British will be given an increase in their liquor quota for the United States from 607,000 gallons to twice that amount, according to the Associated Press.

Announcement of this arrangement was made after the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay and British Commercial Advisor H. O. Chalkley had a lengthy conference with acting Secretary of State Phillips.

The increased pork quota granted the United States is permanent, while the additional quota conceded Great Britain is temporary.

Huge Swindle Ousts French Cabinet Man

Minister Quits, Admitting Part in Fake Bond Swindle; Fugitive Leader in $30,000,000 Plot Shoots Self as Police Break In.

Paris, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—The resignation of Colonies Minister Albert Dealimier from the cabinet of Premier Camille Chautemps was announced tonight. He was forced to quit as a result of the collapse of the Credit Municipal Bayonne, involving him as a sponsor of a huge false bond issue through that institution.

Dalimier's resignation was accepted by Premier Chautemps. The colonies minister was the butt of bitter criticism against the government in the public press and among the members of the Chamber of Deputies.

He admitting writing letters supporting the bond issue by the bank while a member of the government in another regime, but insisted the letters were merely a matter of routine and that he had no personal interest in the matter.

His resignation came after an extraordinary sesion of the cabinet.

It was the second sensation in the case today, as ward had just come to Paris of the attempted suicide in an Alpine cabin near the Italian frontier of Alexander Sacha Stavisky, fugitive head of the bank.

By his side was a pretty Parisian girl, his only companion in a deserted inn on the outskirts of Chamonix, where Paris detectives and gendarmes cornered him after battering in the door to his bedroom.

The girl was found weeping beside the unconscious form of the financial adventurer—a pitifully romantic figure in the life of the man who, collapse of the bank showed, was one of the most colorful swindlers in recent European history.

He fired a bullet through his head just as police battered in the door. Smoke coming from the chimney of the otherwise deserted inn had aroused the suspicions of villagers, who reported to police.

The lonely villa belonged to a friend of Stavisky. He apparently planned to attempt the dangerous exploit of crossing the snowbound Alpine frontier into Italy and was awaiting a favorable moment for the dash when cornered by police.

The man who issued $30,000,000 in false bonds lay near death in a hospital at Chamonix, where doctors worked desperately to save his life that he might be returned for trial.

All doctors from nearby resorts gathered at Mont Blanc Hospital,

RFC Aims To 'Hand-Pick' Bank Boards

Expects to Exercise Choice Wherever Preferred Stocks Are Held.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation expects to name the directors of all banks in which it is a large stockholder, Chairman Jesse Jones said yesterday.

In addition, he indicated the RFC expects to participate in selection of directors of all banks in which the corporation has preferred stock holdings.

Jones revealed that the RFC owns preferred stock totaling $876,000,000 in 5,146 banks. It has loaned an additional $60,000,000 to 1,503 closed banks to assist them in making payments to their depositors.

Under the announced policy, men directly chosen or approved by the RFC will operate or participate in the operation of most of the banks of the country, giving the Government direct control over many banks and a voice in the operation of mist of the others. Jones declined to indicate the number of banks in which the RFC holds sufficient stock to control or approach control. However, it is believed these banks number several hundred.

Chicago Bank Protests.

The controversy over the RFC policy in connection with banks in which it is a stockholder reached a head yesterday when a committee of directors of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, called upon Jones and asked

Court Orders Cannon Trial In Plot Case

Charged With Conspiracy in Handling Funds to Fight Al Smith.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., and his former secretary, Miss Ada L. Burroughs, must stand trial on charges of conspiracy to violate the corrupt practices act in their conduct of the campaign against Al Smith in 1928, the Supreme Court decided yesterday.

The court, in unequivocal language, upheld the validity of the indictment returned in 1923 by a District of Columbia grand jury, charging the Southern Methodist bishop and Miss Burroughs wtih failure to report contributions made to their "Headquarters Committee, Antisaloon Democrats," by E. C. Jameson, wealthy New Yorker.

The opinion, delivered by Mr. Justice Sutherland, also disposed of Bishop Cannon's contention the corrupt practices act was unconstitutional, and sent the case back to the District of Columbia Supreme Court, which will set a date for the trial.

Justice Reynolds Dissents.

Mr. Justice Reynolds dissented from the majority opinion, and agreed with the District of Columbia Supreme Court that the indictment failed to state clearly the crime of which the bishop and his secretary were charged.

The majority opinion did not pass upon the guilt or innocence of the accused pair, but upheld the validity of the last two counts of the indictment, charging conspiracy.

Bishop Cannon, who had listened attentively to oral arguments on his appeal to the Supreme Court, was

Maj. Ocker, Army Blind-Flying Expert, Faces Court for Slur

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 8 (AP). Maj. William C. Ocker, blind flying expert, who developed instruments enabling pilots to guide planes through fog, was ordered court-martialed today for use of "improper language" to other Kelly Field officers after he had been "grounded" on account of imperfect vision.

The charges, signed by Lieut. Col. Henry B. Clagett, commander, and Maj. C. C. Johnston, post surgeon, at Kelly Field, were filed under the ninety-sixth article of war and alleged that on September 29, Maj. Ocker was ordered to appear before Maj. Johnston for physical examination.

The specification under the accusation quoted Maj. Ocker as saying:

"If other pilots on this field, namely such as Col. Clagett, were given more than a cursory examination, they, too, would be off the flying status."

Another statement charged to him was:

"There was collusion between the commanding officer of this station and you (Maj. Johnston) relative to my examination."

After a second examination, Maj. Ocker was placed back on flying status.

Brig. Gen. Charles R. Howland, commander of the Third Brigade at Fort Sam Houston, will be president and law member of the court and Capt. C. M. Ollivetti, assistant judge advocate of the Second Division, will be trial judge advocate.

Others on the court will be Cols. F. R. Defuniak, J. A. Higgins, J. H. Bryson and D. D. Tompkins, and Lieut. Cols. W. R. Scott, J. J. Loving, R. McT. Pennell, W. A. Capron and R. F. Avery.

State's Interests Given Rights Over Claims of Individual.

Verdict May Clear Path for New Deal

Decision on Minnesota Law Limits Sales in Foreclosures.

By Elliott Thurston.

In a momentous 5-to-4 decision the United States Supreme Court held yesterday that in emergency the "public welfare" takes precedence over "individual rights."

Upholding the Minnesota mortgage moratorium law, the majority of the court concurred in an opinion delivered by Chief Justice Hughes declaring that where "the fundamental interests of the State are directly affected" the issue rises above that "of one party to a contract as against another" and becomes a question "of the use of reasonable means to safeguard the economic structure upon which the good of all depends."

On this highly significant hypothesis, which can readily be taken to foreshadow a similar attitude toward the tremendous Constitutional issues raised by the new deal, the court pronounced the Minnesota law valid—and not in violation of "the contract clause of the Federal Constitution."

"Whether the legislation is wise or unwise as a matter of policy," added the decision, "is a question with which we are not concerned."

"Liberals" Support Opinion.

Siding with the Chief Justice were the same four who often in the past have composed what has been repeatedly termed the "liberal majority" of the court—Justices Brandeis, Stone, Roberts and Cardozo. Against these five were the four conservatives — Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Butler and Sutherland, who wrote the dissenting opinion in which they concurred.

How far reaching is this verdict—the first foreshadowing the highest tribunal's attitude on emergency legislation running counter to usual construction of the Constitution—was stated by the dissenters in this way:

"Few questions of greater moment than that just decided have been submitted for judicial inquiry during this generation. He simply closes his eyes to the necessary implications of the decision who fails to see in it the potentiality of future gradual but ever-advancing encroachments upon the sanctity of private and public contracts.

"The effect of the Minnesota legislation, through serious enough in it-

Stampede Kills 76 Japanese

48 Hurt as Thousands Flee Mystery Terror in Rail Station.

Kyoto, Japan, Jan. 8 (AP).—Seventy-six persons were killed and 48 were injured today in a sudden stampede at the Kyoto Railroad station when mob terror swept a crowd saying farewell to recruits for the navy.

An investigation showed most of the victims died at the foot of a stairway leading from a viaduct over the tracks to the station platform. The cause of the panic was unknown.

Scores fell there, crushed and suffocated by hundreds who were shoved down the steps by an irresistible pressure from above.

A crowd estimated at more than 10,000, far exceeding the capacity of the station, had gathered to bid gopspeed to 750 naval recruits.

As usual on such occasions, semi-military reservists and youth organizations turned out en masse for the leave-taking.

Nearly all members of the crowd were men, but about 30 women were believed to have died in the crush.

He revealed experiments which he had carried out proved that a cockroach, which loves dark places, if shocked often enough by electricity in these, will refrain from entering them, preferring to remain in the light, thereby changing habits of long centuries.

G. O. P. Orders Fight to Halt U. S. Spending

Committee Calls for Open Budget Battle Warns of "Pork Barrel."

By Raymond Clapper.

The Republican National committee issued a broadside last night urging Republican members in both Houses of Congress to oppose the Administration spending program except for items considered absolutely necessary.

Alarm was voiced in the National committee's statement over the $7,000,000,000 deficit for the current fiscal year and the Administration estimate that the public debt will reach $31,000,000,000 by June 30, 1935.

"The most constructive thing which Republicans in both branches of Congress can now do is to oppose the Administration program of unlimited expenditures, unparalleled deficits, and the creation of the largest public debt (over $31,000,000,000) in the history of the United States," the committee statement said. "That means the closest scrutiny of all appropriation bills and opposition to all items, of whatever character, which are not absolutely necessary, and which are an invitation to the further squandering of public funds."

Seek Open Battle.

This broadside sought to make a party issue of the budget and to spur into open fight Republicans in Congress who have been somewhat hesitant to aim blows at a President whose popularity is evidenced in the flood of mail being received on Capitol Hill daily.

In its action the Republican National committee exhibited considerably more concern over the cost of the recovery program than New York financial interests, which have viewed the budget outlook with little apparent aprehension. This placid Wall street reaction has puzzled Republican headquarters here.

The committee acknowledged that its drive might not be popular because of the large number of groups which are directly benefiting by recovery expenditures.

Party Response Uncertain.

Whether the Republican minority in Congress will step into the fight vigorously at the urging of its National committee remained uncertain last night. Republican Senate Leader McNary and Republican House Leader Snell have been restrained in their comment on the budget.

The chief blast in Congress yesterday came not from the Republican leaders but from one of the spear carriers, Senator Arthur Robinson, of Indiana, who charged the President had deceived the country. None of his colleagues came to his support and he was left to fight it out alone when Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, swung into a sharp counterattack. On motion of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, assistant minority leader, the Senate did agree to call on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for data on the payment of processing taxes by AAA. Otherwise, Republicans in Congress showed little eagerness to go into a fight over the budget.

The Republican National Committee asserted the Administration's course will lead to uncontrolled inflation. It insisted that no confidence should be placed in the Administration's prophecy that the budget would be balanced later on.

Claims Balance Impossible.

"The program outlined by the President himself for future colossal expenditures makes the fulfillment of the prophecy impossible," the committee said.

"A temporary unbalancing of the budget would not affect National credit. But the Administration's outline of a continuation of unprecedented expenditures and a growing deficit not only for the remainder of this fiscal year but at least throughout the fiscal year ending July, 1935, can not but impair National credit. Such a program, if carried out, would force the Administration to resort to 'uncontrolled' inflation.

"The Democratic Administration has publicly invited 'constructive criticism.' There comes a time in the history of every nation when the most constructive thing that can be done is to prevent those in power from continuing a course of destruction. We are now confronted by such a condition."

The National committee advised Republicans in Congress to insist on control of expenditures.

Ask Curb on President.

"When Congress makes specific appropriations for specific things, no power should be permitted the Executive to thwart the will of Congress by shifting appropriations in order to finance proposals which Congress has considered and rejected in the interest of public economy and sound government," the committee continued.

This was an echo of the complaint of one of the Democratic House leaders, Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee, who recently objected to finding in public works allocations some old familiar projects which had been frowned upon by the Appropriations Committee earlier.

"Not only does the Republican rank and file of the country expect its representatives in both branches of Congress to take this position," the National committee said, "but individuals of both parties having the welfare of their country and the solvency of the Government at heart, expect it."

The committee quoted Budget Director Douglas as warning in a recent speech that the recovery taxes would fall largely on the middle classes, and added that with scores of municipalities, school districts, county and State governments loaded to the limit, the people would soon be at the end of their tax-paying ability.

Warns of Vast Pork Barrel.

"Vast public expenditures feed upon themselves," the committee said. "They make further expenditures necessary. They furnish plausible excuses for additional expenditures which are not necessary. They invariably become 'pork barrel' of scandalous proportions, whereby the Administration in power boldly uses the taxpayers' money and the Nation's credit to subsidize communities, sections, groups, blocs and individuals in the hope and expectancy of winning popular approval and political support.

"An Administration dependent upon dissipation of public funds for its popularity must keep on squandering money, even if it has to start the printing presses in order to get money."

Skipping silently over the record of the Hoover Administration, the Republican National committee recalled the economy policy of the Coolidge Administration, asserting that the 1926 dollar which the Democrats are seeking to restore was a Coolidge dollar.

"The 'New Deal' would bring about the return of the 1926 Coolidge dollar more quickly if it would stop its game of roulette finance and practice old-fashioned Coolidge economy," the committee said.

Cooper Smiles Though Indicted

Grand Jurors Indict Cooper In Bank Case

Continental" they received some of this money as dividends.

That the Commercial loaned $300,000 to the Continental Trust Co. "and with the proceeds purchased for the trust company large numbers of shares of stock of both the Commercial and Continental" is another allegation.

"Such loans," the indictment reads, "thereby caused said Continental Trust Co. to become indebted to the Commercial; that they well knew the then financial condition of the Continental Trust Co. forbade its becoming indebted."

These loans, it was shown in the report, subjected the Commercial to "unwarranted and improper risk; made their actions extremely reckless" and resulted in "great and lasting financial loss" to the Commercial.

Continuing, the jury alleged that the loans were "for the personal use, benefit and advantage" of Cooper and Warren. The charge was concluded with the inference that others might be drawn into the affair, for the concluding item says that "persons, firms and corporations" unknown to the grand jury took par tin the scheme.

List of Charges.

Norman Fischer, member of the law firm of Fischer, Bendheim & Fischer, visited the courthouse and examined the indictment on behalf of stockholders of the closed Commercial.

The overt acts listed, together with the date on which they are said to have occurred, and the amount involved in each is:

March 31, 1930, $15,000; July 1, 1930, $15,000; September 30, 1930, $15,000; December 31, 1930, $15,000; March 31, 1931, $15,000; June 30, 1931, $15,000; October 1, 1931, $15,000; April 1, 1930, $2,659.50; July 1, 1930, $2,659.50; October 1, 1930, $2,659.50; January 2, 1931, $2,667; April 1, 1931, $2,682; June 30, 1931, $2,689.50; October 1, 1931, $2,689.50; April 1, 1930, $2,722.50; July 1, 1930, $2,272.50; October 1, 1930, $2,722.50; January 2, 1931, $2,722.50.

April 1, 1931, $2,722.50; July 1, 1931, $2,430; October 2, 1931, $2,430; January 21, 1930, $175,000; February 7, 1930, $35,353.06; May 1, 1930, $20,000; May 23, 1930, $10,000; June 13, 1930, $10,000; November 5, 1930, $13,500; December 12, 1930, $17,000; December 12, 1930, $2,000; January 27, 1931, $10,000; March 17, 1931, $32,850; August 10, 1931, $3,500; January 27, 1931, $2,205.50; February 5, 1931, $2,195.48; February 25, 1931, $2,195.48; March 16, 1931, $15,368.33, and March 19, 1931, $17,403.40.

Woman, 72, Injured When Struck by Car

Mrs. Mary Dorsey, 72, of 115 Rhode Island avenue northeast, sustained a fractured leg last night when she was struck by an automobile at Twelfth and H streets northeast. She was taken to Garfield Hospital.

Polise said Robert Boswell, 735 New Jersey avenue northwest, was driver of the car that hit Mrs. Dorsey. Boswell was not held.

in so-called taverns. Under the Commissioners' measure taverns could sell only beer. Taverns are places were light lunches are served; such as hot-dog and barbecue stands.

The committee struck out the authority of the Commissioners to close on holidays places selling liquor. It was urged that such a provision might be construed as meaning no liquor should be sold Saturday afternoons. Sunday closing was approved.

Hotel "Is Defined."

The commissioners' defined a hotel as a lodging house having 50 or more rooms for transients. That was the number fixed in the old excise law. The committee cut the number down to 30.

Authority to limit the number of each class of licenses was taken from the commissioners. As reported the commissioners may not fix an arbitrary number.

Another important amendment by the committee provided that licenses may not be refused to businesses established prior to April 5, 1933 because they may be within the prescribed distance of a school, church or public institutions. This is the same provision as was written into the beer law.

Drinking on Credit Regulated.

The case of drinking on credit and the rapidity with which drinking bills mount was given by the committee as reason for prohibiting sale on credit of any drinks but beer and light wines. Druggists licensed to sell on prescription were excepted. Hotels could extend credit to registered guests and clubs could extend credit to members and their guests.

License fees fixed in the bill were as follows:

Manufacturers, Class A, to operate a rectifying plant or distillery, $2,000 a year; a winery, $500; a distillery manufacturing alcohol only, of which more than 50 per cent is used for nonbeverage purposes, $1,000.

Manufacturers, Class B, a brewery, $2,500.

Wholesalers, Class A, to sell to licensed retailers and, in the case of beer and light wines, to consumers, in sealed packages, $1,500.

Wholesalers'—Class B, to sell beer and light wines to licensed dealers, $750.

Retailers—Class A, off sale, in orignal packages, $750; Class B, beer and light wines, off sale, $100, an increase of $25 above the Commissioners' recommendation; Class C, hotel, restaurant and clubs and passenger carrying vessels, on sale only, $500 for hotels of less than 100 rooms, $1,000 for hotels of more than 100 rooms, $250 for clubs, $50 a month or $500 per annum for vessels; Class D, on-sale, beer and light wines only, for taverns, restaurants, hotels or clubs, $200, an increase of $50 over the Commissioners' recommendation; Class E, druggists, off sale, on prescription, one quart limit, $25; Class F, beer and light wines only, for banquets, picnics, barbecues and such affairs, $5 per day; solicitors, $2 per year.

Taxes were left unchanged. Wine containing more than 14 per cent alcohol and champagne or other officially carbonated wines, 50 cents a gallon; wines less than 14 per cent, 20 cents a gallon; spirits, 50 cents a gallon; alcohol, $1.10 a gallon. These taxes are in addition to the Federal imposts.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—The mysterious appearance of $10,000 in negotiable bonds and $2,000 in Liberty bonds, stolen from C. E. Householder's home near here December 21, was under examination by State and local police today.

The bonds were found, rain-soaked, on the porch of a neighbor by State police. The neighbor, police said, was not suspected.

Paul Somers, 21, of Morgan County, alleged to have confessed to another robbery for which he was held for the grand jury, was to be questioned.

The bonds, Householder said, were taken from a hiding place beneath a marble-top table in his home which he had been using as a depository for valuables for 40 years.

'Mad Spending' By Roosevelt Hit in Senate

budget, the Hoosier-Robinson recalled that last spring President Roosevelt told Congress that it was necessary to strike $400,000,000 from the veterans appropriation in order to balance the budget. He flayed the Administration for its treatment of the veterans—a topic avoided by the Democratic Robinson in his reply.

Earlier in the day, however, Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, caused general surprise by introducing a bill to modify the veterans section of the economy act along the lines of the American Legion 4-point program. The Pennsylvanian in the past has been found opposing bonuses and other grants to veterans. By having him introduce the bill, the American Legion played smart politics, it was believed.

The Reed measure would restore presumptive service-connected cases to the compensation rolls—except those obtaining such rating by fraud or misrepresentation, restore the preeconomy act rates for service-connected disability, provide hospitalization for veterans without means and grant $15-a-month pensions to widows and orphans of World War veterans whose deaths were not service-connected. These provisions would add $80,000,000 a year to veterans costs.

Attack Is Lone-Handed.

The day's debate in the Senate was the first of the new session. It was an afternoon chiefly devoted to "letting off steam," as one Senator termed it. Significantly enough, although a number of Democrats undertook to quiz the Indiana Robinson, none of his Republican colleagues came to his defense when he was assailed by the Democratic leader.

Evidence increasd, howvr, that the Republicans intend to keep up a running fire of inquiry and attack on the "new deal" experiments. Two of that party yesterday succeeded in having the Senate ask the Secretary of Agriculture for information regarding two angles of the AAA program—information which undoubtedly later will be used as the basis for criticism.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, sponsored a resolution asking for full information regarding the collection and disbursement of processing taxes.

Senator Robert D. Carey (Republican), of Wyoming, authored a resolution calling for data on Government purchase of hogs and pigs and inquired as to the reason for the drop in prices between early October and November.

Dr. Wynekoop to Deny Killing; Trial Thursday

Chicago, Jan. 8 (AP).—Attorneys for Dr. Alice Wynekoop, scheduled to go to trial Thursday for the "operating table" slaying of her daughter-in-law, said today the elderly physician will not plead insanity but will deny any part in the girl's death.

The defense counsel, W. W. Smith and Frank Tyrrell, also said Dr. Wynekoop would take the stand in her own defense.

Cannon Must Face Conspiracy Trial

not present yesterday when the decision was handed down.

Contributions totaling $66,600 were made by Jameson to the "headquarters committee, Antismith Democrats," of which Miss Burroughs was treasurer. Bishop Cannon directed the work of this committee, which helped put Virginia, Texas, North Carolina and Florida in the Republican column for the first time since reconstruction days.

10 Counts in Bill.

Failure of the committee to report all the $66,600 received from the New Yorker led Bishop Cannon's foes to center an attack on this phase of his political activities.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, denounced the churchman on the House floor, and a subsequent statement by the Representative led to a libel suit, on which Tinkham never was tried.

In 1932 a District grand jury returned an indictment of ten counts, the first eight of which alleged specific failures to report contributions to the Clerk of the House of Representatives. The last two alleged conspiracy to violate the corrupt practices act.

The trial judge sustained a demurrer to the entire indictment. The District Court of Appeals reversed this decision, and on Bishop Cannon's appeal to the Supreme Court the reversal was sustained yesterday.

Gaithersburg Brothers Are Burglar Victims.

Someone certainly had a grudge against the Offutt brothers of Gaithersburg, Md.—John and Elmer—yesterday.

When John come to his office, where he is a partner in the firm of Offutt & Byrns, he found thieves had broken in and stolen a quantity of candy and cake, valued at $11.

At the same time, as Elmer went to fit his key in the door of his jewelry store, it didn't work. Forcing open the door, he found burglars had stolen four watches from his showcase.

White House Lifts Agency Fund Curb

the President had intended, it was explained at the White House. Particularly, did the Public Works Administration fear its application, since in its haste to free Government funds contracts are being issued almost daily.

Legal advisers of the emergency administrations reported that the first order, which became effective January 3, prevented rapid action on allocations, and thus served to defeat the primary purpose of the organizations. Some delay resulted from the order, but the President's action yesterday paved the way for continued allocations.

Mr. Douglas, advised of the proposed substitute order in New York, was reported entirely amenable to the change. However, the same issue was threshed out last summer, when he sought budgetary control of the recovery agencies in a losing fight with Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes and Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

The first Executive order prevented all the new alphabetical agencies from incurring obligations until their estimates of expenditures were approved by the Budget Director. This gave the various administrations considerable pause, since Mr. Douglas' "go slow" policies are well known.

RFC Aims to Help Pick Bank Boards

that the stockholders, other than the RFC, be permitted to name the chairman of the board.

In spite of the directors' protest, Jones is expected to insist on the appointment of Walter J. Cummings, head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as chairman of the board, and to contend that othe directors must have his approval. At a press conference following his meeting with the Chicago bankers, he indicated he had not receded from his position. Another meeting with the chicago group is expected today after which a definite announcement that Cummings will head the institution is expected.

The RFC owns $50,000,000 in preferred stock of the Chicago bank. Apparently there was no dispute over the power of the RFC to name its own chairman over the protest of bank directors, if it wishes to exercise that power. Directors of the bank are to be named at a stockholders' meeting in Chicago Thursday.

Directors Want Ranney.

The choice of the bank directors for chairman of the board is George A. Ranney, former treasurer of the International Harvester Co.

As a protest against the RFC policy, Sewell Avery, head of Montgomery Ward & Co., recently resigned as a director of the bank.

Ranney was asked by the directors last November to consent to serve as chairman of the board. The Federal Reserve Board indicated that the appointment would meet with its approval. The RFC board failed to express an opinion, but later failed to deny reports that Cummings was the corporation's choice over Ranney. When it became apparent that the RFC would insist upon Cummings being named, Ranney withdrew his name. Following his withdrawal, the committee of directors was named to come to Washington and protest to Jones.

Representing the Chicago bank at the meeting were James R. Leavell, president; Alfred Cowles, C. B. Borland, W. F. Hayes, Herman Waldeck, and A. A. Sprague.

Highest Court Backs Holiday On Mortgages

Rules Public Welfare Is First; Clear Path for New Deal Seen.

self, is of trivial significance compared with the far more serious and dangerous inroads upon the limitations of the Constitution which are almost certain to ensue as a consequence naturally following any step beyond the boundaries fixed by that instrument."

By applying the same, or similar reasoning, the court might now be expected to sustain virtually all of the major emergency legislation and acts of the Chief Executive taken in the name of the public welfare, but overriding previously valid Constitutional rights. Thus, it will be deduced, inevitably, that the court will look kindly upon the various issues likely to come before it testing the validity of the numerous executive orders compelling surrender of gold, suspending the gold clause in Government and other bonds, taking command of banks, &c., and upon legislation affecting the NRA, the AAA and the other instrumentalities of recovery and reform.

"The decision," Gov. Olsen of Minnesota was quoted by the Associated Press, "represents more than a triumph of the police power caluse of the Constitution over the due process of law and obligation of contract clauses.

"It really represents a triumph of human rights over property rights. It also indicates that we can change the system under which we live in any manner we desire and keep wihtin the Constitution."

The Minnesita law extended the time in which mortgaged property sold by foreclosure could be redeemed. Much of the opinions dealt with the specific issues, but the far large implications of the decisions preoccupied the court, as was reflected by the length and scope of the written views.

Compromise Held Necessary.

"It is manifest from this review of rtour decision," said the majority opinion, after many pages of citations, "that there has been a growing appreciation of public needs and of the necessity of finding ground for a rational compromise between individual rights and public welfare.

"The settlement and consequent contraction of the public domain, the pressure of a constantly increasing density of population, the interrelation of the activities of our people and the complexity of our economic interests have inevitably led to an increased use of the organization of society in order to protect the very bases of individual opportunity.

"Where, in the earlier days, it was thought that only the concerns of individuals or of classes were involved, and that those of the State itself were touched only remotely, it has later been found that the fundamental interests of the State are directly affected, and that the question is no longer merely that of one party to a contract as against another, but of the use of reasonable means to safeguard the economic structure upon which the good of all depends.

Changing Needs Pointed Out.

"It is no answer to say that this public need was not apprehended a century ago, or to insist that what the provision of the Constitution meant to the vision of that day it must mean to the vision of our time. If by the statement that what the Constitution meant at the time of its adoption, it means today, it is intended to say that the great clauses of the Constitution must be confined to the interpretation which the framers, with the conditions and outlook of their time, would have placed upon them, the statement carries its own refutation.

"It was to guard against such a narrow conception that Chief Justice Marshall uttered the memorable warning—"We must never forget that it is a Constitution we are expounding" . . . "a Constitution intended to endure for ages to come, and, consequently, to be adapted to the various crises of human affairs."

Borah Urges U. S. to Follow Aloof Policy

Nation Is Advised Against Inviting Contempt by Meddling Abroad.

have been isolationists. And this, I trust, we shall ever be.

"If there be any truth established by the experience of nations, it is this: That to accommodate your foreign policies to the demands or in the interest of others nations at the peril of your own security, is to invite contempt, and it seldom fails to earn a more substantial punishment."

Greater Patriotism Urged.

For the leaders of the Nation, Borah, ranking Republican of the Foreign Relations Committee, urged the goal of an increased and intensified patriotism instilling into the heterogeneous millions of America a pride of country with its finer qualities directed along high, honorable and peaceful lines.

Internationalism has failed, he said, because nationalism is the tissue of every people. The fight against nationalism, he continued, "was a fight against the strongest and noblest passion s outside of those which spring from man's relation to his god." Civilization, he added, would wane without it.

"This country has within her boundary people from almost every land under the sun, still conscious, under certain conditions of 'the mystic chords of memory.' Every civilization has made its contribution to the American civilization. How easy to transfer the racial antipathies and political views and controversies of the Old World into our very midst.

Invitation to Controversies.

"Once abandon our policy of aloofness from European controversies, and we bring these controversies into American neighborhoods, and into our National life. We are constantly warned how persistently that transfer takes place. Only recently the bitterness, the intensity of a European controversy, nerved the arm and guided the hand which clasped the dagger of the assassin, not only in our very midst but under the most sacred and solemn surroundings.

"Eschewing policies which tend to keep alive former attachments and the political controversies of the Old World, we should exert to our utmost the healing, cementing power of patriotism and mole 120,000,000 people into an invincible, intellectual, economic, and political force for the enactment and administration of just and equal laws."

Without mentioning Germany and Hitler by name, he said:

"There is no creed of faith, no political principal or form of government, but must at some time or other undergo attacks—and this seems to be one of the periods of challenge and general assailment. We read of a movement lately initiated in one of the leading countries of Europe to delete the Ten Commandments, presumably that part which says: Thou shalt not kill; edit the Lord's Prayer, since that perfect supplication encompasses all men regardless of race or creed; abolish Christianity, and conform the teachings of the Nazarene to the practices and principles of their political leader.

Assault on Liberty.

"This wicked and blasphemous exhibition of diseased minds seems only a little more impious and no less vain and impotant than the persistent attacks everywhere encuontered upon popular government, the right and capacity of the people to direct and manage their own political affairs.

"Here and elsewhere, either by those who in their own land have destroped the last vestige of personal liberty sending to prison and to the torture chamber men and women because of race, religion or political opinions and sacrificing all rights of the people to the gratification of personal power, or by those in our own land who consult appearances rather than realities and mistake surface indications for the deep currents which move below, is heard the solmen pronouncement that popular government has failed and constitutional democracy is dead.

"We need not be dismayed but we can not be unconcerned. The right to worship according to the dictates of one's conscience, the right to freedom on account of race, are parts of that political liberty, that freedom from oppression which is the life-blood of Democracy.

"These things, together with free speech, a free press, the right of assemblage, and those guarantees, the sum total of which make up the inestimable blessings of personal liberty, are the things for which Democracy stands. They are the things for which we stand. And I venture to believe that we will not fail to preserve them.

"Looking backward and looking forward, proud of our past and confident of our future, we shall find our highest service, not only to our own, but to mankind and to the peace of the world in transmitting these principles unimpaired to succeeding generations. This is our supreme duty. I believe that the foreign policy of Washington and Jefferson and Lincoln will best enable us to meet and discharge that duty. I am, therefore, at all times, in periods of turbulence and in periods of calm, and without aptology and without compromise, committed to its support."

Rehearings Begin For Lumber Code

Organized labor and the mill owners prepared to clash today as rehearings begin on the lumber code, which the lumber industry recently characterized as its "salvation."

From the labor side come demands that sectional wage differentials be eliminated, making rates uniform throughout the country.

Labor spokesmen contend pay in certain sections is inadequate and that such a condition should be corrected.

Federal Funds Supplied to Others While the District Waits.

[This is the third of a series of ten articles on the hidden slums of Washington.]

By Felix Bruner.

When the Government, through the Public Works Administration, indicated that money would be available for housing and for slum elimination, it was stated that Washington would serve as a model for the rest of the country.

Elimination of Washington's alleys has long been an objective of many people in the Nation's Capital City and the announcement that housing would form a part of the relief program was looked upon as an opportunity finally to make much-needed improvements.

In the Government exhibit at the World's Fair in Chicago were charts showing how Washington proposed to eliminate alley housing. Citizens' committees became active. Recommendations were made.

To date nothing has been done. At the same time other cities have received big allotments and slum clearance work is going ahead. Washington's appeal for money still is pending, with hope still bright that action will not be postponed too long.

Jobs Must Be "Proved."

Robert D. Kohn, director of housing of the Public Works Administration, last November made this statement:

"An unfortunate impression has gained ground that one or more projects for the City of Washington has actually been approved by the Public Works Administration. Actually such projects are still to be worked out and their economic validity proved before they can even be submitted to the administrator for his approval. Much work is to be done both in research as to suitable sites and in the actual economic study of the cost of production and the rentals that can be attained."

Since that statement was made the work has progressed, but Washington still is without the money to go ahead.

Meanwhile, work in other cities is under way.

When the Public Works Administration first was set up, it was planned to lend money to local dividend corporations for housing purposes. The law does not permit such corporations in the District. A bill authorizing such corporations was before Congress, but it was not passed.

Then Way Is Cleared.

Later, after the same difficulty was experienced in other cities, the way was opened for the Government actually to take over the building of houses and elimination of slums. This was accomplished through the formation of the Federal Housing Corporation. This eliminated legal obstacles to improvement and abolishment of Washington alley houses.

While Washington has been marking time, Detroit and Cleveland, particularly, have been going ahead.

Instead of Washington leading the way, it was announced at the Public Works Administration that the Detroit project would serve as "a demonstration of what the Federal Government can do in the low-cost housing field."

The Detroit project will cost between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 and will be carried out by the Emergency Housing Corporation.

The Detroit construction will be two-story, fireproof row houses to accommodate approximately 2,550 persons. The project is expected to employ 2,000 men working 30 hours a week for six months.

Clear Up Downtown Area.

The project, according to the FWA announcement, is to eliminate uneconomic and unsocial conditions in a crowded area close to the downtown district now occupied in large part by Negroes. (This description could as well fit Washington alleys.) The Detroit project will provide 2,900 rooms which will be rented for about $6.30 per room. Amortization would spread over 35 years with the Government benefiting from the revenues until reimbursed for its expenditures.

Building plans call for small building blocks formed into hollow rectangles or quadrangles. There will be an average of 28 dwellings to each quadrangle of which four will be in two-family flats and 20 in single-family, two-story group houses.

The initial construction program contemplates razing of existing buildings and erection of new structures covering 10 or 12 city blocks. In addition to living quarters, there will be certain recreational and commercial accessories.

Originally a loan of $12,000,000 to a limited dividend corporation in Cleveland was approved. It was found, however, that the corporation could not meet requirements, so the Government has stepped in and will undertake to handle at least part of the project directly.

To Build 3,500 Rooms.

The first Government plan for Cleveland calls for expenditure of $3,600,000, and the provision of 3,500 rooms. These are two of the principal direct Government projects. Numerous other housing allotments for limited dividend organizations have been approved. Washington is not in the list. Among the allotments are:

Philadelphia, model housing project, $845,000.

Queens Borough, New York, $3,210,000.

Hutchinson, Kans., for 20 suburban houses, $40,000.

Euclid, Ohio, Cleveland suburb, $1,000,000.

St. Louis, low-cost project, $500,000.

Virgin Islands, for two-room homes, $45,000.

Bronx, New York, $5,184,000.

Raleigh, N. C., low-cost housing, $168,000.

Indianapolis, elimination of 750 slum dwellings, $4,460,000.

San Francisco, low-cost housing, $3,230,000.

Atlanta, slum clearance and new houses, $3,812,500.

Cincinnati, new apartment buildings, $1,980,000.

Richmond, low-cost houses, $663,000.

Chicago, for new apartments, $1,333,000.

School Bus Hit By Train; 2 Die

Score of Children Injured as Engine Drags Car 100 Feet.

Bassfield, Miss., Jan. 8 (AP).—Two children were killed and a score of others were hurt, several seriously, today when a Mississippi Central passenger train crashed into a school bus which apparently had stalled on the tracks near Bassfield station.

There were 46 children in the bus, ranging in age from 7 to 18 years, all residents of the Goodhope community and all pupils at the Bassfield consolidated school, including the driver, Ernest Williamson, 18.

The bus was carried 100 feet down the right of way before the train could be stopped.

The more seriously injured were sent to hospitals, principally at Columbia, Miss. Others were treated in the Bassfield depot.

The two killed were Ipasca Stapleton, 7, and Alice Aultman, 18.

2 Men, Woman, Saved From Grounded Yawl

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 8 (AP).—Two men and a woman, passengers on the yawl Onowa, Philadelphia, were rescued off Fort Morgay by Coast Guardsmen today after their small craft grounded last night.

Those rescued were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Malpass, of Philadelphia, and George Gillespie, of Mackina Island, N. Y.

Gore May Request Leave From Duties

Ill Health Suffered by Island Governor.

An indefinite leave of absence loomed yesterday as the probable answer to the question of whether Gov. Robert H. Gore would return to his post at Puerto Rico.

Poor health and political troubles have plagued the Florida publisher ever since his appointment last spring. He returned to this country more than a month ago and ever since reports he intended to resign have been current.

Gov. Gore is believed ready to ask for an indefinite leave, at the end of which period if he still is reluctant to continue, his resignation will be accepted. A frequent visitor at the White House since his return, he is known to be anxious to retire.

Sen. Lewis Chides Briton, U. S. Critic

"Run Along Home," He Advises Economist.

(Associated Press.)

In the first formal speech of the session yesterday, Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, arraigned John Maynard Keynes, British economist, for addressing an open letter to President Roosevelt through the press.

With his characteristic flowery language, the Democratic whip questioned the "good manners" of the British economist. He concluded with the slang injunction to Keynes: "Now run along home and play with your marbles."

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, interrupted to ask if the writer suggested that Great Britain pay her debt to the United States.

"That's the subject he carefully avoids," Lewis replied.

'Son' Demands 4 Millions Left By Eccentric

Declares Slain New York Realty Operator Was His Father.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—A claim to the entire $4,000,000 estate of Edward Albert Ridley, eccentric real estate man who was slain in his subcellar office on the Lower East Side last May, was filed today by a man who asserted he was Ridley's son.

The claimant is Jens Nelson, who says he is also known as Jens Nelson Ridley, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. A statement filed by his attorney in surrogate's court today set forth that Nelson was the aged Ridley's legitimate son and therefore his sole legal heir.

Heirs to the Ridley estate, who had agreed peaceably on a division of the estate, immediately prepared to oppose Nelson's claim.

"We are going to fight this thing very vigorously," said John L. Ridley, Jersey City lawyer and grandnephew of the dead man. "We don't believe any such story.

"I'd heard that a man in Poughkeepsie was going around making some sort of claim, but I thought it was in connection with a note."

James W. Gerard and George A. Lewis, attorneys for the other claimants and for the executor, were present when Nelson's claim was filed. Lewis said that last November Nelson had come to his office with a different story and signed a quit claim, which he was prepared to produce.

Nelson's claim was filed through his attorney, Richard H. Arnold, of Poughkeepsie. He had with him a baptismal certificate recording the birth of the boy and giving the parents as Edward Alfred Ridley and Orlean Nelson Ridley.

Arnold said he had been informed the marriage took place either in New York City or in Brooklyn in 1865. Ridley's parents objected to his marriage and the couple lived together only a short time, the lawyer said. Then the woman went to Michigan, where her brother was working in a lumber camp, where her son was born.

Emma Goldman Waits Right to Enter U. S.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The Sun said today that Emma Goldman was in Toronto waiting for the Administration to grant her permission to return to the United States, from which she was deported December 21, 1919.

The Sun says she was told that permission would be forthcoming if she agrees to make only literary speeches, but that she had refused to consent to "wearing a gag."

Big Swindle Ousts Paris Cabinet Man

where Stavisky was placed on the operating table. Stavisky had been unconscious since found at the villa.

Country Is Stirred.

Nation-wide excitement was caused by the capture of Stavisky. The police had a tip that he was seeking to hide in the sparsely settled Alpine region, and their search centered around the village of Chambery.

Inspector Charpentier, of the Surete Generale in Paris; four gendarmes and two detectives had almost abandoned the hunt when villagers from Chamonix sent word that smoke was coming from the small inn on the edge of the resort, where thousands of persons pass daily on their way to the ski plateaus.

Charpentier and his aids hurried to the villa. They rang the bell and shouted to whoever was inside to come out.

The police decided to break in, and shattered a window. Simultaneously, there was a shot inside. The officers clambered through the window and found the door to a bedroom locked.

The inspector led a rush which battered the door in. On the floor they found their man.

Fled Police For Week.

Stavisky had been in the Alps for the past week. The trail showed that he was forced to flee from the town of Servox when the police approached his hideout there. He remained for a few days at Chambery, staying in a hotel room until the police heard he was in that vicinity. He then fled to Chamonix.

Stavisky carried a passport in the name of his masseur. He knew the Alpine passes intimately and had it not been for unusually heavy snowfalls in the past week his plan to escape over the mountains to Italy probably would have succeeded.

162 Million Set For Completing Virginia Roads

Primary System Program for 10 Years Will Go to Legislature.

Richmond, Jan. 8 (AP).—Approximately $162,000,000 will be needed to construct gaps and improvement of various routes in the 9,012-mile primary system of State highways within the next ten years, if Virginia is to provide adequate road facilities for normal highway traffic, the State Highway Commission announced today.

This estimate did not include large bridges not now under the supervision of highway commission over the major streams of the State.

The detailed figures released today will be placed before each member of the General Assembly this week.

The estimate showed most money is required in the western part of the State, notably, the Bristol, Staunton, Lynchburg and Salem districts, where the percentage of primary system completion is considerably lower than in the eastern and northern sections.

Estimated amounts required to complete the highway system in construction districts were as follows: Bristol, $29,723,835; Staunton, $27,016,500; Lynchburg, $22,735,849; Salem, $21,605,279; Culpeper, $18,090,500; Suffolk, $17,332,018; Richmond, $16,362,903; Fredericksburg, $9,984,385.

State Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley said $150,000,000 in State, Federal and local funds already has been expended on the primary system.

Since no local funds hereafter will be available for the present 9,012 miles in the primary system, all money to complete the work must come from the Federal and State governments.

Approximately $16,000,000 a year will be needed for such construction work, an amount far in excess of that anticipated for the coming fiscal year.

Small Part Now Foreseen.

At present the highway commission anticipates less than $2,000,000 for primary system construction work in the fiscal year 1934-35. During the present year the Federal Government made a special grant of $7,400,000 for highway construction work in Virginia, but the State was able to supply less than $3,000,000.

Mr. Shirley said it is up to the Legislature to say whether Virginia is to suspend construction work on its primary system, or what the State shall do in the direction of launching at once and steadily pursuing the program of completion announced today.

The present primary system will require approximately $5,000,000 annually for maintenance—an amount which was said not to be available under the proposed reduction of $1,800,000 in automobile license fees on private passenger cars.

W. and L. Speaker

DR. ARCHIBALD HENDERSON, University of North Carolina professor of mathematics and leading authority of Einsteinism and Shavianism, who will be the speaker at the Founders' Day exercises at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., on January 19.

Dr. Henderson To Be Speaker Founders' Day

Washington and Lee to Honor General Lee January 19.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department at the University of North Carolina, will be Founders' Day speaker at Washington and Lee University here, January 19, anniversary of the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee, president of the institution from 1865 to 1870.

The board of trustees of Washington and Lee will meet Founders' Day and following the university assembly at which Dr. Henderson will speak, President and Mrs. Francis Pendleton Gaines will entertain members of the board at a luncheon. Fowler McCormick, recently elected board member and grandson of Cyrus Hall McCormick, inventor of the harvester, and trustee and benefactor of Washington and Lee, will attend his first meeting.

Founders' Day comes during the first semester examination period, but no examinations or classes will be held that day.

Dr. Henderson, a close friend and interpreter of Einstein, and in addition to his mathematical achievements is recognized as an authority on drama and American history. He is former president of the Dramatic League of America and official biographer of George Bernard Shaw.

Dr. Henderson is a native of North Carolina and a graduate of its State university, from which he received A. B., A. M. and Ph. D. degrees. He has studied at Cambridge University, England, the University of Berlin and the Sorbonne, Paris. He has received degrees from the University of Chicago, the University of the South and Tulane University.

Best known of his scientific works are "Lines on the Cubic Surface" and "Relativity—A Romance of Science." His dramatic studies include "Bernard Shaw, Playboy and Prophet," "European Dramatists" and "The Changing Drama."

Mileage Pay Vote Hits Legality Snag

Delegates in West Virginia Unlikely to Collect.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Members of the West Virginia House of Delegates have voted themselves a second mileage pay for the present extraordinary session of the Legislature, but it looks as if they will not get by with it.

Although the House passed a resolution ordering the payment for expenses incurred by members in returning to their homes for the holiday recess, State Auditor Edgar B. Sims has refused to recognize it, holding it illegal.

Sims quotes an opinion given by the Attorney General's office at a previous session, which said the constitution provides for only one such payment to members for each session, regardless of recesses.

Suit Will Test City Borrowing Of PWA Funds

West Virginia Courts to Pass on Legislature's Enabling Act.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—To test the constitutionality of the Legislature's act authorizing municipalities to borrow Federal funds for public works projects, a friendly suit has been instituted in the Mason County Circuit Court.

Filed by Ollie Brewer, a taxpayer, the suit seeks to enjoin the City of Point Pleasant from borrowing $116,000 PWA funds for a sewage system. The suit questions whether the State enabling act came within provision of the governor's call for the last special session of the Legislature, at which it was enacted.

The case, set for Thursday, will be immediately appealed to the Supreme Court regardless of the finding.

Meanwhile, a shake-up in the Civil Works Administration in three counties has resulted from the recent investigation of political favoritism requested by United States Senator M. M. Neely, of Fairmont.

In Logan County, Miss Mabel Sutherland, former relief administrator, has been transferred. In Roane County, Mrs. H. H. Camp has been displaced as administrator and in Kanawha County W. W. Allen, accused of political favoritism, has been transferred to become an assistant to William N. Beehler, deputy State relief adminstrator.

Three municipalities and a church organization have applied for PWA funds. The Huntington Baptist Temple seeks $75,000 for a church school building; Fort Gay, Wayne County, wants $30,000 for a water works and sewage project; Cairo, Ritchie County, seeks $8,000 for a water system; Greenbrier County desires $146,500 for a new courthouse at Lewisburg.

Men Busy in Davis Area.

Davis, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Much progress is being made on CWA projects in this vicinity. The road to the scenic Blackwater Falls is being straightened and hard surfaced. Much work is being done at the school building, changes made in the town hall, and city streets are being hard surfaced. Nearly 100 men are employed on the Government road along Blackwater Canyon.

Eighty men will be transferred today from CWA projects in this county to two new highway projects on Backbone Mountain.

Waynesboro Survey Begins.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—A CWA survey of manfacturing and industrial concerns in Franklin County begins today. The survey will include the larger establishments and wholesale houses, also the smaller concerns and retail businesses. A survey also will be made of all schools and religious institutions. A historical record will be compiled of all towns, boroughs and historical spots in the county.

Virginia Opens Police Schools

Machine Gun Practice and Gas Use Classes at Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—The second annual police school conducted here will begin tomorrow in the municipal building under direction of Sergt. W. S. Newton. Officers from several counties and towns will attend.

While the course embraces many subjects studied last year, several new features are included in the 4 hours of classwork. Two of the added features are classes in machine-gun practice and the use of tear gas.

A representative from Washington has agreed to come here for the gas demonstration. A course in criminology and further study of police contact with the public; a study of local ordinances and method of filing reports with the Commonwealth's attorney on major crimes, are scheduled.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Staunton's police zone school, which is open to policemen and county officers of the Shenandoah Valley, will be opened here next Monday.

Officer Russell Lively, of the Staunton department, will be the instructor, having attended the State school of instruction in Richmond.

Classes will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 10 to 12 a. m., and from 8 to 10 p. m.

R. M. Neighbours, Once Judge, Dies

Frederick Countian, 83, Was Democratic Leader.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Roger M. Neighbours, 83, formerly judge of the orphans' court, who died Saturday from heart trouble, were held today with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

He was a son of the late Nathan Owen Neighbours and was born on his father's farm near this city in 1850. After a public school education he purchased a farm in Tuscarora District and operated it until he retired in 1912 here. He was a leader in Democratic politics, and was elected a judge of the orphans' court in 1893 and reelected at the end of his term.

He is survived by one son, John O. Neighbours, Baltimore, and one daughter, Mrs. John W. Lowell, of Chicago.

City Books to Be Audited.

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—The David A. Jayne Co., of Charleston, W. Va., soon will make the annual audit of the books of the auditor of Clifton Forge. The audit to cost $350.

Robber Who Beat Farmer Is Sought

Marylander, 65, Seriously Hurt by Marauder.

Centreville, Md., Jan. 8 (AP).—Stephen C. Kimble, 65, farmer, was in a critical condition today while officers searched for the unidentified man who beat him unconscious with a club.

Kimble told Sheriff J. Elmer Anthony the man stepped from behind the barn door Saturday night and rained blows on his head.

Kimble's wife, the only other person at the farm not far from here, heard her husband scream. She rushed out to find him lying on the ground. The sheriff said the motive appeared to be robbery, as the man got a single dollar bill from Kimble's wallet.

Re-Districting In West Virginia To Start Fight

All Congressmen Invited to Hearing on Plan to Alter Lines.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—West Virginia Representatives in Congress have been invited to appear before the State Senate committee on redistricting at Charleston, according to Senator Louis A. Henderson (Democrat), Dordridge, subcommittee chairmna. The committee will hold a hearing to suit the convenience of the Congressmen.

A big squabble is in the offing over redistricting the six Congressional districts, which will be the next measure to emerge from the committee. The principal fuss will be over the first, now represented by Robert L. Ramsey (Democrat), of Follansbee, and the fifth, represented by John Kee (Democrat), of Bluefield.

The Legislature has the power to make these districts either slightly Democratic or overwhelmingly Republican. To accomplish the former, the other districts of the State would be weakened a bit from the Democratic standpoint. To down the latter, four districts might be made safe for the Democrats.

The committee has a number of redistricting bills before it, affecting Congress, the State Senate and the State House of Delegates. None has yet been ordered out, but it is expected that a measure affecting the House of Delegates will be reported out soon and passed by the Senate. It already has passed the House.

Meanwhile, the House of Delegates is standing pat on its bill setting up a State administration to cooperate with the Federal Government in the enforcement of NRA codes.

The House refused to reconsider the measure on the ground that if any changes are needed they may be made by the Senate.

Originally adopted before the holiday recess, the bill was brought back for reconsideration at the request of Delegate L. E. Lantz (Democrat), Wetzel, who read a letter from the National NRA saying legislation approving National codes would be sufficient and that the State administrations are unnecessary.

Delegate John P. Beacom (Democrat), Cabell, sponsor of the measure, however, submitted another statement from the National NRA saying the House bill as drawn is satisfactory.

Family Loses Home In Warehouse Blaze

Six Barely Escape Death at Adamstown, Md.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Fire of undetermined origin yesterday destroyed the warehouse of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Adamstown, the upper part of which was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Willard, as a dwelling.

Awakened by smoke, Mrs. Willard barely had time to arouse her husband and four children. All of the family's furniture and personal effects were destroyed except the clothing they wore. Firemen from Frederick saved the adjoining passenger station.

The flames originated in the warehouse attic. Freight on the first floor and in the basement was saved. The loss is estimated at about $3,000.

Hunt Reported Due to Become Comptroller

Roanoke Man Believed to Be in Line for Post Under Peery.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Interest is keen in political circles here over reports in Richmond that D. R. Hunt, retired commissioner of revenue for the City of Roanoke, will be named State comptroller in the administration of Governor-elect Peery.

Mr. Hunt's term as commissioner expired December 31 after many years of serve. He was defeated in a contest for the office in the primary campaign last August by former Hustings Judge John M. Hart, who the year before lost his fight in the Legislature for reelection to the bench.

Mr. Hunt's name has been mentioned in connection with the comptroller's job since word was received of the resignation of E. R. Combs to become RFC manager for this district. A. B. Gathright, of Henrico County, is the present comptroller.

James B. Botts, formerly of Roanoke, is understood to be a candidate for appointment as director of the division of buildings and grounds in the Peery administration. Mr. Botts now is a clerk in the office of the State comptroller.

Waynesboro Group to Depart.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Senator W. H. East and Delegates W. Stuart Moffett and C. G. Quesenbery will leave here tomorrow to attend the opening of the General Assembly at Richmond Wednesday.

Mr. East, who represents Augusta and Highland Counties, and Staunton and Waynesboro, will be a member of three important committees, agriculture, mining and manufacturing; public education and social and child welfare. He also is a member of the State Highway Commission.

Mr. Moffiett, in point of service, is one of the oldest members in the Legislature, this being his seventh term. He will be a member of the finance committee and chairman of the agriculture and mining group.

Mr. Quesenbery, who recently was chosen to succeed Walter E. Beard, will be entering his first term. It is understood that he has strong backing for selection on the appropriations committee.

H. J. Hoge Dies; Banker Was 62

Loudoun Rites Tomorrow for Philanthropist and Civic Worker.

Hamilton, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Henry J. Hoge, 62, banker, philanthropist and civic worker, will be held here Wednesday at 11 a. m. in the Friends Church. Mr. Hoge died last night.

When the Farmers and Mechanics National Bank here was organized 23 years ago, Mr. Hoge was made secretary-treasurer, and later became cashier, remaining in the bank 18 years, when bad health caused him to resign. He remained a director until his death.

He was a native of Loudoun County, a son of the late Daniel J. and Sarah Elizabeth Taylor Hoge. He is survived by his widow, who was a Miss Smith, of this county; one brother, Howard M. Hoge, of Lincoln, and a sister, Mrs. A. E. Warner, Baltimore.

Burial will be in Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Mary Hoeber Dies at Leesburg

Widow of Artist Will Be Buried This Afternoon.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Wildman Hoeber, 75, of Leesburg, widow of Arthur Hoeber, New York artist, will be held from St. James Episcopal Church tomorrow at 3 p. m.

Mrs. Hoeber lived in New York for 25 years. When her husband died, she returned to Leesburg. Two sons, Harold Hoeber, of Massachusetts, and Robert Bentley Hoeber, of Leesburg, survive.

Dog Guards Canine Pal's Body

Holds Spectators Away From Pup, Auto Victim, and Later Keeps Vigil in Cold at Scene of Norfolk "Tragedy."

Norfolk, Jan. 8 (AP).—A sequel to the many tales of the dog standing guard over its master's body is told here of the pup which refused to forsake a canine playmate in death.

They were playing in the street—a shaggy brown pup and another with black and white spots. They belonged to nobody.

An automobile whizzed around the morner and hurried on, leaving the brown dog dead in the street.

The black and white dog must have thought it was part of their game. He capered around and then dashed down the street as though daring the other to race.

His challenge ignored, he came back, gazed at the limp form in a puzzled manner then licked the dead dog's face. Then seeming to understand, he lifeted his head in a long, mournful howl.

A crowd gathered and sympathetic people tried to see if Brownie was beyond help. But snarling Spot drove them back with flashing teeth.

For three hours he stood guard. And then the garbage driver came, routed Spot with sticks and stones and hauled Brownie away.

The crowd departed, but not Spot. For hours through the cold, windy night he crouched, shivering, near where his playmate fell.

Weesternport Favors Mansfield as Justice

Westernport, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Joseph L. Mansfield, merchant, has been recommended by the Democratic State central committee of Allegany County for appointment as justice of the peace at Westernport.

There is a vacancy in this office due to the resignation of C. Leo Connell, who was named acting postmaster of Westernport.

J. T. Swager Rites Held at Clarksburg

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held this afternoon for J. Truman Swager, 72, prominent business man and official of the Imperial Ice Cream Co. He is credited with having been the first man in West Virginia to manufacture ice cream commercially.

Swager formerly served as city councilman. Surviving are his widow, a son and four daughters.

Fog-Bound Ships Reach Baltimore

Make Port After 3 Days in Chesapeake Bay.

Baltimore, Jan. 8 (AP).—Four vessels, fog-bound in the Chesapeake Bay since Friday night, made port here today as sunshine and southwest winds dispersed the fog screen that had prevailed along the Atlantic seaboard for three days.

The Baltimore mail liner, City of Norfolk, with 20 passengers, was among those to make port.

Fog and rough weather dogged her throughout her Eastern voyage. She was due to arrive here last Wednesday, but did not reach Norfolk until Friday.

McCullough Continues As Mine Cases' Referee

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—E. S. McCullough, Fairmont, W. Va., who already acted as referee for the Fairmont, W. Va., and Big Sandy, Ky., coal fields, has been named umpire for the Maryland coal region, which includes adjoining West Virginia. He will hear his first case at Keyser next Wednesday.

The umpire works under the New Deal. If no agreement is reached in parleys the matter finally reaches the joint labor board, with Mr. McCullough as umpire. In case of disagreement by the joint labor board, the umpire has the final decision.

'Support NRA' Plea by House In West Virginia

Delegates Would Avoid All Code Violators; School Union Asked.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—A resolution directing all departments of the State government "to give full and loyal support to the National recovery act," was adopted today by the House of Delegates.

The resolution said "certain departments of our State government are purchasing supplies from firms who are violating their NRA codes."

Merger of the Fairmont State Teachers College at Fairmont with West Virginia University and the removal of the school of medicine of the university from Morgantown to the Fairmont plant, was recommended today as an economy move by a subcommittee of the House committee on finance and taxation.

Educational forces of the State today submitted a resolution to Gov. Kump and the Legislature disapproving State control and administration of the public school system. The resolution favored payment by the State of basic teaching salaries for six months and provision of an equalization fund guaranteeing a nine-month term.

Dr. Clifton F. McClintic, warden of the State penitentiary, today asked the Legislature to state its attitude on the Federal act restricting interstate shipment of prison-made goods. He seeks intervention of the State in a case instituted by the State of Alabama to be argued Tuesday before the Federal Supreme Court, upon a contention that the Hawes-Cooper act is unconstitutional. Suspension of effectiveness of the act is sought until the case is decided.

The warden said two prison factories had suspended, making 600 prisoners idle, and that a third employing 200 will suspend when the act becomes effective January 18.

Ready readers await the offers in Post Classified Ads, the first thing in the morning.

FORD V·8 TRUCK PRICES REDUCED

New lower first cost has now been added to low cost of operation and low cost of maintenance

Now for the first time an 8-cylinder, 75 horsepower truck is available for as little as $500. The Ford V-8. The truck that has proved itself in actual service—proved its power, speed, stamina and economy.

Economy of operation and upkeep is one of the outstanding features of the Ford V-8 engine. Most "8's" have been big engines, designed for use in heavy, expensive units. But the Ford V-8—compact, simple, easily and inexpensively serviced—has shown that high power can be had at very small cost. The carefully kept records of thousands of owners establish remarkably low figures not only for gasoline and oil consumption but for service and repairs. It is the most economical Ford engine ever built.

The new low prices add another important economy factor. Today, more than ever, the Ford V-8 is the logical truck to help your business show a profit. The nearest Ford dealer is ready to help you select the Ford unit best suited to your business.

Virginia Foes Of Sales Tax Likely to Win

Liquor and Utility Levy Increase Expected to Supply Need.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 8.—Rejection of a proposed general sales tax by Democratic leaders became apparent today as delegates poured into Richmond for the opening of the General Assembly session Wednesday.

House Speaker J. Sinclair Brown, unopposed for reelection, virtually sounded the death knell of the sales tax when he revealed the only sources of revenue contemplated were additional levies on the receipts of public utility corporations and expected income from legalized liquor sales.

Any movement for a general sales tax will be sidetracked, the speaker predicted. He insisted there was no necessity for such legislation.

Mr. Brown forecast increased taxes on receipts of power, water, gas and fuel companies would yield more than $1,000,000 in the next two years. He placed prospective liquor revenue at $1,675,000 a year.

Distribution of all liquor revenue under general State supervision was advocated by the speaker. In contrast to this view members of the Virginia Liquor Control Commission previously proposed that one-third of such income be allotted to the general State fund and the remainder be divided among local political subdivisions.

Indications point to a relatively quiet legislative session, Brown added.

Wilbur C. Hall, Loudoun County, house finance committee chairman, discredited demands for a sales tax. He argued conditions failed to justify such a departure from time honored practices of raising State revenue.

Similar opinions were voiced by Ashton Dovell, house floor leader, and Senator William M. Tuck, Halifax County.

Mr. Dovell contended the sales tax would be a burden on the poor. "I'm against the sales tax and don't see how it can pass," Mr. Tuck declared.

$2,131,000 Deficit Likely.

Richmond, Jan. 8 (AP).—New levies on public service companies were predicted today by J. Sinclair Brown, speaker, of the House of Delegates, as he arrived for the opening of the 1934 session of the General Assembly Wednesday.

He agreed with other spokesmen for the administration that all of the anticipated liquor profits are necessary if the budget is to be kept balanced.

The State now is facing an estimated deficit of about $2,131,000. Under a special session law, provision was made for discharging this before other appropriations were made, and the Governor's advisory committee on the budget is understood to have proceeded under this mandate.

Senator W. A. Garrett, of Ridgeway, chairman of the upper house finance committee, today said he favored continuance of the deficit, if paying it off at present would necessitate any measurable increase in taxes.

Newsmen Given Budget.

Gov. Pollard today explained, confidentially, to press representatives his budget recommendations, to be delivered Wednesday when the Legislature convenes.

Most of the early arrivals had bills in the process of drafting in the office of William Shands, director of the division of legislative drafting and research. Schools, liquor and taxes still provided the principal topics of conversation, and were forecast as major problems.

Democratic members will hold their usual caucus tomorrow night. More than a score of judges in the State are up for reelection, but these will not come before tomorrow's caucus, it was indicated. The principal business will be the nomination of officers and attaches.

The first order of business Wednesday will be organization. The governor's message will be second.

Perry Still Silent.

There are numerous perassembly predictions. Some have forecast unusual powers for governor-elect Peery.

The governor-elect, himself, has kept silent, except to say his program probably will be regarded as "conservative."

There has been little discussion on the subject of redistricting. It may be the assembly will redistrict the State for Congressional, House of eDlegates and Senatorial representation. Certainly Congressional redistricting is an item of concern. The 1932 session attempted it, but the act was upset by the State supreme court. Virginia's present congressmen were elected at large.

While much discussion has been given to new sources of revenue, there are others who are talking economies. These are giving consideration to the eSnate Economy Committee's report, which would effect economies estimated at $1,000,000, to proposals of consolidations of local governmental offices, and the suggested system of indeterminate sentences and paroles for reduction of criminal costs.

Three Engineering Buildings Now Assured to Virginia U.

Appropriation of $379,000 Approved for Public Works Project.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).

Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, has received official authorization of the appropriation of $379,000 toward the construction of new engineering buildings by the Federal Public Works Administration.

The construction of the new engineering group, Dr. Newcomb estimates, will keep an average of 144 men busy for a year or more. When work is started about 100 men will be employed, and the number will increase until 150 are on the pay roll of the project.

The buildings will open for teaching purposes in September, 1935. Bids are to be advertised for within 30 days.

Three buildings are to be put up on the site selected, facing McCormick road just across U. S. highway No. 29 from Clark Hall, new home of the law department. The group will extend back nearly to the parking area for Scott Stadium.

The largest of the three buildings will face McCormick road. This will be flanked by two narrower buildings extending to form a "U," which will be connected with a colonnade across the open end. The whole group will be about 300 feet square and surround an interior court about 150 feet square.

Engineering theory will be taught in the largest of the three buildings. The smaller ones will contain shops and laboratories. To one side of the front and close to the National highway, will be an auditorium seating 300 persons.

Foster Studio, Richmond.

DR. JOHN LLOYD NEWCOMB.

Accommodations will be provided for a maximum of 300 students of engineering, who will be taking courses of instruction covering a five-year period.

1776 Relic Found On Culpeper Land

Belt Buckle Discovered on Covington Place.

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—An old military belt buckle of brass and copper has been found on the Covington land, the homestead known in the Revolutionary period as "Soldiers' Rest," and also was used as a convalescent home for veterans of the World War.

The oblong buckle shows an eagle with a bunch of arrows in one talon and an olive branch in the other. At the bottom of the buckle a vine forms a border and at the top and ends are shown 13 stars.

This relic is held by Mrs. C. H. Tinsley, a descendant of Capt. Francis Covington, of Culpeper, Revolutionary hero.

Fugitive in Prison After Seven Years

Must Serve Term Imposed for Killing in 1926.

Welch, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Following a delay of seven years, Mat Justice, 37, finally has started to serve a 12-year term in the penitentiary.

After Justice was convicted in 1926 in Mingo County of second degree murder and was released on bond pending an appeal, he jumped bail. Recently he was arrested at Welch in connection with a triple slaying in Virginia and his identity was established. Authorities then ordered him committed, to the penitentiary to serve the sentence imposed.

When arrested at Welch Justice was suffering from bullet wounds.

Abingdon Tobacco Price 11 Cents on Reopening

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 8 (AP).—An average price of 11 cents a pound was obtained for tobacco sold today on the local burley market which reopened this morning.

Prices were about the same as those which prevailed at the time the market was closed in mid-December.

Tull, Oyster Packer, Dies in Maryland

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 8 (AP).—Alonzo Eugene Tull, 80, Marion Station oyster packer, died yesterday at his home in Tull Corner.

He was founder and president of the A. E. Tull Co., an oyster concern, until he retired three years ago. Mr. Tull also was active in civic and church affairs at Marion Station. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

All of Maryland's Engineers at Work

None Jobless, Survey Hires Many, Says Steinberg.

Every unemployed civil engineer in Maryland has been given a job, it was reported yesterday by Prof. S. S. Steinberg, head of the civil engineering department of the University of Maryland.

Prof. Steinberg, who directs the Maryland unit of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, said 35 parties had been distributed throughout the State. Each contains five engineers and five unskilled laborers.

When the work of the engineers is completed the system of monument markers which they are placing will provide base lines from which any future development work may be made.

Groceries Admission Fee To Purcellville Social

Purcellville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. a social will be held at the Purcellville School for the benefit of the hot lunch project to be carried out this winter.

These contributions are asked for admission fee: Canned tomatoes, onions, potatoes, salt, sugar, canned carrots, canned corn, beans, rice, cocoa, macaroni, spaghetti and cabbage.

Hay, Grain and Feed Burned With Barns

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Hay, grain, feed and an occasional chicken went up in smoke on the Dittmeyer Farms, near Halltown, yesterday when fire of an undetermined origin destroyed the barn and cow barn.

The loss, covered by insurance, was estimated at $2,500, including the contents of the barn.

Virginia Cities List Favorable Year's Records

Woodstock Firemen Busy; Danville Killings Few; Bristol Mail Gains.

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Traveling only 149 miles, the two trucks of the Woodstock Volunteer Fire Department answered 20 alarms during 1933 and salvaged property worth more than $25,000 from flames, the annual report of the organization shows.

One of the 20 alarms was false, and one was to another town. The value of buildings afire was estimated $31,960, while the actual aggregate damage to the structures was held to $6,625.

During the year, the firemen laid a total of 2,350 feet of hose. Pumping hours aggregated seven. Truck No. 1 bore the brunt of the work, traveling 132½ miles. Truck No. 2 covered but 16½ miles.

During 1933, an average of 18 citizens responded to each fire alarm.

34 Killed in Danville.

Danville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Only one person was killed by an automobile in Danville during 1933, but 41 were hurt in 88 accidents. Of the injured, 18 went to hospitals. The total property damage was $3,542. Chief of Police James H. Martin said it was the best traffic report for the city in several years.

Only 34 persons met a violent death here during the year. Ten died here in hospitals from automobile accidents in the vicinity; nine persons were murdered, there were four suicides, trains killed five and three were burned to death. There were two suffocations and one person was killed by a street car. Of the total violent deaths, 23 were white people and 11 colored.

The low traffic mortality rate is ascribed by Martin to drivers becoming more careful and to the fact that automobiles are maintained in better running order due to State regulations.

Postal Receipts Vary.

Bristol, Va., Tenn., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Combined receipts of the two Bristol postoffices during 1933 lacked only $5,600 of equaling the combined receipts of the Johnson City and Kingsport, Tenn., offices.

Of all four postoffices, the Bristol, Tenn., office, under Postmaster Henry Smythe, was the only one to show a gain in 1933, going from $73,138.71 in 1932 to $77,314.03.

There was a decline in Bristol, Va., from $66,300.30 in 1932 to $63,058.78, but the decline was smaller than the Bristol, Tenn., gain, and the total for the two cities together in 1933 was $140,372.81, as compared with $139,439.01 in 1932.

Mrs. Lulu M. Divine, postmistress at Johnson City, Tenn., reported a drop of $9,713.37 from the 1932 figure of $99,201.87. Kinsport, according to Postmaster J. E. Miller, fell from $59,704 in 1932 to $56,494.19 in 1933.

Death Rate Drops.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—The death rate here in 1933 was the lowest in five years. There were 205 deaths in the district comprising Waynesboro, Mont Alto borough, Quincy and Washington townships. At the State Sanatorium, located in the district, but not included in the district totals, there were 64 deaths in 1932, one more than the previous year.

In Waynesboro 137 deaths occurred; Mont Alto, 8; Washington township, 35; Quincy township, 25.

Accidental Deaths Increase.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—A 64 per cent increase in accidental deaths was recorded in Roanoke County in 1933, compared to 1932. Automobile accidents claimed 14 lives and in one instance three persons died from burns.

County Coroner Kolmer has pronounced the death of Lester Hoal, 10—who was shot with a rifle in his brother's hands January 1—an accident.

Fewer Marriages In Clarke.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Cupid lost ground in Clarke County during 1933, when only 42 marriage licenses were issued. In 1932, the number was 57. Of the 42 in 1933, 35 were to white couples and 7 to colored. The oldest man applying for a license was 84; the oldest woman, 67; the youngest man, 18, and the youngest woman, 17.

Bad Guess

Thief Gets Only Clothes, Misses $20,000 Gems.

Danville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—A thief made a bad guess when he selected one of the three sample cases on the Southern Railway depot platform early yesterday, all belonging to Louis Susskind, jewelry salesman of Province, R. I.

The stolen trunk containing personal clothing while the other two had in them jewelry and silver valued at $20,000.

Police have not found the missing trunk.

6,767 Acres of Land Asked for Unake Forest

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Suit for condemnation of 6,767 acres of mountain land in Smyth and Grayson Counties has been filed by the United States against the Lincoln Investment Co.

The Government seeks to add the land to the Unake National Forest.

Boy Fails to Duck For Low Bridge

CCC Youth Seriously Hurt Atop Freight Train.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Willie McDonald, 18, of the CCC camp near Schuyler, Nelson County, was being treated at University Hospital today for serious injuries received in an accident atop an Eastbound C. & O. freight train near Ivy yesterday.

He was standing on the car with his back toward the engine when the train came under the overpass on the Charlottesville-Staunton Highway at Ivy. He was knocked to the roof of the car.

He was in an unconscious condition at the hospital today and information concerning his family could not be supplied.

Robertson, trustees.

Future Monk

Methodist Organist Will Enter Monastery.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Frederick Paul Eggert, organist at Center Street Methodist Episcopal Church here for two years, has announced that he will become a Benedictine monk. He has departed to visit his parents near Cincinnati for a week before going to St. Meinrad's Abbey, near Evansville, Ind., to study Catholic church music and liturgy. St. Meinrad's is a Benedictine monastery with which is connected a seminary and college. Their church organ is one of the finest in the country. Mr. Eggert will be on three-year probation before he can assume the full Benedictine habit. He is reparded as a church organist of unusual talent.

Virginia Gets Game Refuge

Commission Will Lease 650-Acre Tract in Pittsylvania.

Richmond, Jan. 8 (AP).—Carl L. Nolting, chairman, today said the Commission on Game and Inland Fisheries has arranged to lease 650 acres of land in Pittsylvania County for a game preserve.

The preserve will be used for the propagation of game and as a recreation center for sportsmen who will be permitted to fish in a 30-acre lake. Hunting will be forbidden.

Food crops will be planted on the preserve probably in the spring, and as soon as possible the lake will be stocked with fish.

The commission, in its negotiations with the county, said efforts would be made to obtain Civil Works Administration funds for construction of the lake, for road building and fencing. If CWA funds are denied, the commission's funds will be expended.

Quail and wild turkeys will be the principal game propagated on the preserve, Mr. Nolting said, with possibly a few pheasants and deer, in the event the county declares a closed season.

The preserve would provide birds and turkeys for restocking the State's fields and woods, and the overflow of wild life from the preserve is expected to benefit hunters in surrounding counties.

Woodstock Rites Held For Mrs. Bauserman

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Funeral rites were conducted from the Harrisville Reformed Church, near here, this morning for the late Mrs. Alice Bauserman, 76, widow of Jerry Bauserman, who died Friday afternoon.

Surviving Mrs. Bauserman are two daughters, Mrs. Nellie Coleman, Berryville, and Mrs. Clara Beidler, Woodstock; two sons, Clarence Bauserman, at home, and Oscar Bauserman, Page County, and three brothers, John and Milton Burner, Woodstock, and Luther Burner, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Padlock Closes Virginia Home After Charges

Drastic Step by Court at Fredericksburg Sequel to Complaints.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). One of the most drastic antiliquor laws was applied against the premises occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Rice here, when under a padlock order Judge Frederick W. Coleman in corporation court ordered evacuation by occupants and closing of the property at 712 Main street here.

Rice has been arrested several times on liquor charges, though he never has been convicted. Local authorities say they have had many complaints from neighbors of the Rices' one-room establishment. The Rices have two children.

Violation of the prohibition law is about the only offense, except for nonpayment of rent, for which authorities can evict people from the premises in which they live and padlock the property, it was stated.

James Henkel, 30, of Alexandria, said to have broken into the Janney-Marshall Wholesale Grocery here November 25 and removed $720 worth of cigarettes, was indicted by a special grand jury on the charge. A retaining order was sent to Harrisonburg, where Henkel, with Ray Davis, 36, of Alexandria, and Dennis L. Smith, 35, of Washington, allegedly were caught in the act of taking cigarettes from a wholesale house there.

Davis was given the maximum sentence of 10 years by Judge W. H. Bartrand, after pleading guilty, while the cases of both Henkel and Smith, who pleaded not guilty, will be tried before a jury.

Melvin Powell, 23, and Nelson Staples, 18, were indicted yesterday. Powell is charged with taking $30 from the Goolrick's Pharmacy here December 4. Staples is charged with breaking into the Pitts Recreation Parlors December 17, removing $17 from a slot machine.

The special grand jury consisted of Chester B. Goolrick, foreman; M. L. Latham, Robert W. Harris, J. Edward Tompkins, and D. L. Stoner. The trial date for Powell and Staples was set for January 23.

22 Indicted in Allegany.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Four of the 22 indictments found by the January grand jury of the Allegany County Circuit Court are for the sale of liquor without license under the county law and involve Cumberland residents.

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan reminded the grand jury that the county liquor law is still in existence and it must be enforced. These indictments are considered the first move to break up the scores of speakeasies operating here.

The 22 indictments were the fewest of any court term in many years.

The grand jury concurred in the recommendation of Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka, to tear down the vacant Western Maryland Hospital building, regarded as a fire menace.

The grand jury also recommended renovation of the courthouse and improvements to the county jail, Sylvan Retreat, the county hospital for the insane, and the Allegany County Home.

Doris Kenyon And Max Baer Can't Escape

Marooned Backstage, They Make the Best of a Bad Situation!

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

An exquisite quality of beauty, more vibrant and alive than one had been led to expect, even from many captivating screen reflections of it in a succession of the cinema's more important releases over the years; an alert intelligence that bespeaks a rich cultural background; a versatile interest in people, places, events and the arts—all the impressions, in short, that Doris Kenyon has conveyed to her admirers from the screen as a star of both silent and audible pictures are magnified and intensified immediately one steps inside her dressing-room, backstage at the Earle this week.

Doris Kenyon

Swathed in the luxurious comfort of a rose satin lounging robe, trimmed in soft white fur and set off by the gay red boots that form a part of the costume she wears in her "Hungarian Flower Song" number, from which she had just emerged, Miss Kenyon converted a bleak and dismal Saturday midafternoon hour into a brief interval of sparkling wit, lively banter and interesting and informative reminiscence.

She recalled, for instance, that her present is her first professional engagement in Washington since she appeared here years ago as an inexperienced and naive ingenue in Al H. Woods' production of "The Girl in the Limousine," one of the attractions, if memory serves either of us, offered at the old Shubert-Garrick Theater when that tiny F street house was in its heyday.

"A Very Naughty Farce."

"In its day," says Miss Kenyon, "that was looked upon as a very naughty farce. Many of the lines, I have learned since, were thoroughly shocking, although I doubt if they would even raise an eyebrow today. I have been told that I was good in the part of the title character because, not quite grasping the sinister significance of a great deal I was called upon to say, I said it with an innocence that exactly fitted the requirements.

"Since then, I have never made a professional appearance here until now. But I have visited here socially frequently during the interim and last year was to have sung at one of Mrs. Townsend's charming recitals, an eagerly anticipated pleasure that never quite materialized owing to circumstances that could not at the time be either foreseen or forestalled.

"It has always been my thought that Washington is a city in which I should dearly love to live. Few of the other larger cities in the country have taken quite such a hold on my imagination, but the Capital—as is probably true of all capitals, as a matter of fact—possesses a cosmopolitanism, an opportunity for such delightful contacts and such an imposing beauty that if I were called upon to settle down somewhere else than in my own comfortable home in California, I am sure it would be here."

Sees With Clear Eye.

This point of view, in Miss Kenyon's case, is wholly understandable. She is a young woman of an unobtrusive but none the less obvious intellectuality, to whom the better things of life and the finer fruits of useful living are very real and very dear.

Her friends are the leaders, not the second-raters; her aspirations fall nothing short of supreme achievement in all she undertakes; her gaze always is upon the stars.

One is not told these things. They become immediately and subtly apparent, as one chats pleasantly and exchanges views with a young artiste whose charm, poise and savoir faire set her a little apart from a majority of the others whose sole conception of a workable philosophy of life seems to be wrapped up in that fallible fetich of the theater that "the show must go on."

Not dissociated from this aspect of her personality is the chagrin she experienced at a whispered confidence of George Arliss' when Dr. and Mrs. Hubbell, Mr. and Mrs. Arliss, Miss Kenyon and probably a few others were spending a night on Mount Wilson gazing at the wonders of the heavens through the mighty telescope of the Wilson Observatory.

Mr. Arliss Confesses.

"A great many people," Miss Kenyon reports Mr. Arliss as saying, "have expressed their wonder that I have so completely abandoned the stage and am devoting all of my time and professional effort to the cinema. As a matter of fact, I have read hundreds of manuscripts of stage plays of late in the constant fear that I might happen across a good one.

"In all the years I was on the stage, I was never free from an intense and unconquerable nervousness that made me utterly miserable and my working seasons long periods of nervous indigestion, sleeplessness and intense physical discomfort. I am heartily glad to be free from it all and enjoy, at my advancing age, something of the peace and tranquillity of the studios."

Miss Kenyon can not imagine a lifetime dedicated to such mental suffering as Mr. Arliss describes. She cured herself of a similar tendency by a systematic and drastic course of mental discipline and psychological "treatment" that has largely emancipated her from the tortures of that bane of most artistic careers, stage fright.

When asked why her voice had never been heard from the screen—that is to say her singing voice—her explanation was that at first she hadn't been ready, and latterly no satisfactory vehicle has seemed to present itself.

"I will eventually do a musical for the screen," she says, "but it must be the right one, made and presented under the proper auspices. I am not a revue artiste. In fact, my only fear at the moment in connection with my vaudeville engagements is that having launched my song sketches as purely concert offerings, they may not be exactly the things with which to confront a 'cross-section' audience such as attends the better picture houses.

"It is a new experience to appear before an audience not specifically attracted by the known nature of the 'lyric silhouettes' I have to offer. It is a most interesting experiment. By a few changes since Friday's first performance, we think we have it narrowed down now to pretty much what they like."

That is a conclusion which we hereby make unanimous!

Miss Kenyon, it comes out with some difficulty, has never been, as we mistakenly believed, a concert pianist. Her playing, or so she says, is of a purely desultory, or parlor, quality that would never do for the concert stage, although she has at times, when occasion demanded, played her own accompaniments in recital. Her present accompanist is Max Rabinowitch, who first came to this country with Chaliapin and has since played with Kreisler and various others of the foremost concert artists. He accompanies Miss Kenyon on all of her concert tours, which have extended to Germany and Austria and which this year will include an Easter Sunday appearance at the Town Hall in New York.

Mr. Max Again.

All of the sports writers having borne down on his affaires du coeur, as you might say, and all of the sob-sisters and woman's page experts upon his bulging muscles, probable future in the ring and general, all-around physical fitness or unfitness, as the case may be, there seemed nothing left for an aenemic and diffident dramatic editor to dwell upon but his impressions, from inside and out, of show business, when he encountered Master Max Baer, the crooning contender, backstage at Loew's Fox a little later that same muggy Saturday afternoon.

Max Baer.

Leading with our chin, we suggested that having insulted him variously in the public prints these past few days we now had come over to do it in person, so he suggested the dressing room as the spot where we might best be killed without making too much fuss for the stage hands and thus interrupt their pinochle game.

In the bright lights of room 305, or whatever it was, Max grew to more fearful dimensions in every direction. We must have shrunk proportionately when Max turned loose that infectious grin of his. They say he always smiles when he is hurt!

"—— of the Big, Bad Wolf?"

Leading lightly with the left, we tore right into him like a rabbit tearing into a bulldog.

"What's the difference, if any, between your nervous reactions to crawling through the ropes and walking out there on that stage in front of an audience?"

"There isn't any difference," he countered, disentangling his right from our vertebrae, which it had approached from the front, "except that when I go into the ring I know a lot more about what I'm supposed to do than when I walk out there on that stage. I'm nervous both times. But I'm beginning to get the hang of this stage business, and like it. That is, I like the dough.

"It isn't bad when you can double up with a stage engagement and a floor show in a night club, the way I did a week or so ago in New York at Loew's State and the Cafe de Paree. That was good for six grand a week, and that's what matters.

"Don't try to tell me that when the old bank account is gone, all these folks will be packing around the stage entrance for me to sign my autograph. They won't even know I'm alive as soon as I get out of the money. That's why the insurance companies are getting a lot of it for annuities. This can't go on forever and when it's over, if I only have twenty-five bucks a week coming in, I still can eat."

A Born Financier.

Here, it seems to me, is the key to the whole Baer point of view. He admits that he is, first and foremost, a fighter, anxious to get a shot at the title. But the stage and pictures look good to him until the chance of getting that shot comes along, simply because they return handsome dividends. In the back—or maybe it is in the front, for all I know—of Max Baer's mind is an instinctive, innate money sense that appraises every opportunity in terms of dollars and cents. When it is all over, he won't be walking around on his heels.

Feinting him offguard again and crowding right in to smother him with rights—and a few wrongs—we asked how come that pretty good voice with which he is doing important things to "Dinner at Eight" as the closing number of his act this week.

"That all started at a stag luncheon at the New York Athletic Club. Mario Shambley, the opera singer, and I got to needling each other and by the time we got through he had told me more about singing than Jack Dempsey had about spinning an opponent and crossing with my right. I'm just beginning to get the hang of the thing. How does it sound?

Proud of Brother.

"Never mind how it sounds, because my kid brother has got the voice of the family. He's just a kid, only 18, stands 6 feet 6½ inches tall and weighs 252. He has been offered $1,500 for a professional fight, but I've shooed him away from that. One fighter at a time is enough in the family. So we've got Buddy taking singing lessons up in San Francisco. He has a swell bass-barytone voice and can do imitations of Bing Crosby, Phil Harris, Russ Columbo and all the boys, just the same as if they were right there in the room with you. We've set up one of those trick microphones for him right there in the house with a loudspeaker attachment and, boy, does he do his stuff!"

"So that's how your grandfather met your grandmother, eh?" and he took a full count of nine. Remarking behind his hand that "this guy is probably crazy," we heard him promise his handler that he'd take us in this round.

Waiting for Jack.

"When Jack Dempsey gets in here Sunday or Monday or Tuesday, I hope he has this Carnera fight in the bag. That'll make a lot of dough. We can be good friends and still go in there and sock for all that money. Somebody else will get it if we don't, and after all, its just a game. You fight while you're in there, but you don't have to be enemies all your life just on that account. Carnera and I look to me like the only 'natural' in sight. And think of that gate!"

Always that money sense crowding out into view. Max may be a great fighter and a dandy crooner and all that, but what he is, more than anything else, is a big business man.

We are going to suggest to Darryl Zanuck that he and Joe Schenck star Max Baer in "Rothschild," instead of George Arliss.

But you can't help liking the guy. He is a fine, jovial, hearty personality—and does he let go with everything he's got when he shakes hands!

"—— ten, ye're out!"

Artist Wiley Padan has portrayed here with his facile pen some of the unique facts relating to the principal members of the cast currently appearing in "Fugitive Lovers," on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater. It is on this bill that Max Baer, heavyweight contender, is the headlining stage attraction.

National

Neither strictly amateurs nor professionals—yet possessing the ebullience of the former and some of the studied sureness of the latter—students of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts presented last evening at the National Theater a condensed version of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," the second act of William Schwenk Gilbert's whimsical "The Palace of Truth," and an adaptation of act one of Jean Webster's "Daddy-Long-Legs."

As in former presentations of the academy, the selection which seemed a priori most likely to be most difficult proved again to be the one in which students, director and arranger scored a signal success—the tabloid "Twelfth Night," arranged by Maurice Greet.

Much of the earlier movement of this Spakespearean tale of loves and masquerades, in which the Ossa of main plot is piled high with the Pelion of subplots, was programmed, the play opening with the masquerading Viola making amorous overtures to the Countess Olivia for the Prince Orsino. From then on the play goes merrily apace. Amazing as it may seem, the condensation presents an admirable "Twelfth Night," presenting the essential points with astounding fidelity to that which is gained from a full-length production.

Margaret Martin made a charming boy and, on assuming her role of Viola, made an even more ingratiating lady. Her twin brother, Sebastian, was played by E. H. F. Dickens. The role of Orsino, the Prince of Illyria, was carried in a convincing manner by Zack Mace, with Maude Preece the unresponding Olivia.

Whimsical Comedy.

"The Palace of Truth," a fantastic comedy, was the second offering, a delightful whimsy done somewhat in the motif of "Nothing But the Truth."

What happens in the second act gives Mr. Mace, as the Prince; Lilla LaGarde, as the Princess; Sylvan Lappen, as the King; Nancy Ordway, as the Queen, and Emily Brattie, as the pilfering Lady Mirza, a chance to make the most of a situation that demands both finesse and a highly developed sense of dramatic values.

Of "Daddy-Long-Legs," the familiar and beloved Jean Webster work, little need be said, for here is a drama whose inherent charm and wholesomeness makes for as nearly an actor-proof play as could be wished. Not that the cast, headed by Ruth Hartrick, as Judy; Jon Anderson, as Jervis Pendleton, and Dorothy Winchole and Bernice Avis, as the Lippett girls, and Virginia True, as Mrs. Pritchard, needed such a vehicle, for they did not, and their thoroughly masterful handling of the play is eloquent testimony not only to their sympathy, but to their craftsmanship.

Each part of the program was announced by a herald, played, in the order of their appearance, by Marie Walcott, Marilyn Miller and Emily Beattie.

Where Credit is Due.

To Clifford Brooke—no less to his associates—is due double credit as a director whose ability can not be gainsaid in respect to stage or screen drama, and as the titular head of this academy.

Among the others participating in the evening's demonstration were, in "Twelfth Night," Carol Jaspersen, Eleanor Harding, Clare Borjes, Barbara Ann Culley, Marjorie Harris, Sylvan Lappen, J. B. Davis, Helen McGlue, Philip G. Wyatt, Evelyn Walker, Helen Walker, Theola Nigro, Walter Studdiford, Jon Anderson, Harold Hickman.

In "The Palace of Truth," Paul Melton, Walter Studdiford, Edmund Vertner, Jon Anderson, Nina Partridge, Doris Rosedale.

Gayety

"STEP LIVELY GIRLS." Wilner Wonder Wheel presents a new burlesque show in two acts, starring Harry Steppe, Joan Lee and Ritzie Phillips, with Dorothy Ahearn, Peggy Smith, Al Weber, Charles McNally, Mae Moore, Mitch Todd, Lucille Wray, Johnny Clark and Lew Denny. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Whether the title of this week's offering at the temple of giggles and gyrations is an admonition for greater speed and spontaneity, or merely a descriptive term is a moot question. However, despite the apparent sluggishness of the program as a whole—and especially the comedy skits—there is plenty to justify the cash customers' making their weekly visit to the Gayety.

After several weeks of excellent, fast-moving and genuinely hilarious comedy, the Wheel slips in its presentation of Harry Steppe and Al Weber, abetted by Johnny Clark and Lew Denny. The skits lack not only a sustained sense of farcical values, but the elements on which the humor is based can not be rated too highly. Mr. Clark is in a unique position this week, in that it is he who largely handles the straight parts, with Mr. Denny assisting.

With Joan Lee and Ritzie Phillips leading the portions of the entertainment the boys really come to see, little's left either to the imagination or to be desired! Peggy Smith and Dot Ahearn are good, but, leaving the judgment to the occupants of the stalls in both orchestra and balcony, Joan was better, and Ritzie was undeniably best.

Primadonnaing is Mae Moore, whose warbling is equalled by Mitch Todd, whose solo, while Lucille Wray was fantastically toeing on the proscenium, marked one of the high spots of the performance.

Regretful to say, the line girls, as a singing aggregation, make a swell corps de ballet. If they had not endeavored to exercise their vocal cords their several numbers would have been vastly improved. As it was, the opening "Gay Nineties" routine, the spider-and-the-fly number and the act one final tableau were sufficient to cause most of their choral shortcomings to be forgotten.

Census Group Will Have Aid Of Chichester

Former Virginia Delegate Will Share Office in Alexandria.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, has appointed Dan M. Chichester assistant director of the Census Bureau for the fourth census district. Mr. Chichester for two terms was representative from Stafford and Prince Willian Counties to the Virginia House of Delegates.

He will have an office with District Director J. A. Somerville at Alexandria. The district embraces the cities of Alexandria and Fredericksburg and the counties of Fairfax, Loudoun, Fauquier, Prince William, Stafford, Spotsylvania, Culpeper, and Orange.

The census is designed to obtain recovery information throughout the Nation.

Winchester Pay Increases.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—The Civil Works Administration pay roll in Winchester increased $1,000 the past week, Frank W. Bailey, assistant CWA administrator, announced. Pay checks totaling $3,202.65 were distributed among 235 CWA workers Saturday.

Lynchburg Gives Figures.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—The National employment service here since its establishment five months ago has found work for 2,778 persons in Lynchburg and the counties of Amherst, Campbell and Bedford. The report of W. S. Oglesby, business manager of the work, shows this registration: Lynchburg, 2,249; Bedford, 1,454; Campbell, 1,688, and Amherst, 1,712. Included in these figures are 972 unemployed women.

Covington Shows Gain.

Covington, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—With the approval of several projects the Civil Works Administration in Covington now is hitting its full stride in providing work for unemployed in Alleghany County.

Six hundred men were on the pay roll last week, an increase of approximately 170 workers over the preceding week. Nearly 300 are employed here.

Bristol, Tenn., Penalized.

Briston, Va., Jan 8 (Spl.).—Forty men were laid off Bristol, Tenn., CWA pay rolls Saturday in furtherance of a State order to penalize the city for allegedly having exceeded its 389-man quota several weeks ago. Supported by figures showing the city's average number of men has been less than the limit, Street Commissioner Arthur Green said attempts would be made to get the penalizing order rescinded.

Unless the men are put back to work, it was pointed out, jobs will be delayed and other work that has been planned will be impossible to carry out.

Cigarette Sets Fire To Man Already Dead

Danville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held here today for C. Edward Holland, 65, who was found dead and on fire seated half clad in a chair in front of an open fire at his apartment late Saturday night. Interment was made here.

Coroner J. E. Taylor said death was probably due to apoplexy and that Mr. Holland was dead before he became ignited from a cigarette which fell from his mouth.

Acting Postmaster Named at Crisfield

Acting postmasters for one West Virginia and one Maryland town were announced yesterday by the Postoffice Department, the Associated Press reported.

They are: Egbert L. Quinn, jr., at Crisfield, Md., and H. A. Karnes at Freeman, W. Va.

Thieves Smash Window.

Herbert E. Johnson, proprietor of a grocery store at 405 Morse street northeast, told police yesterday that thieves smashed a window and took groceries and meat totaling $18.

Professor's Wife Buried in Staunton

Mrs. E. W. Roller Expired en Route to Hospital.

Broadway, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret Gertrude Roller, 31, wife of E. W. Roller, Broadway High School agricultural instructor, were held today from the home. Interment was in Staunton.

Mrs. Roller, ill with scarlet fever for a week, died Saturday in an ambulance while en route to the Harrisonburg Hospital.

She was a daughter of Walton T. Weller, prominent Augusta County farmer, and was a graduate of Weyers Cave High School and Mary Baldwin College, Staunton. She taught one year in Southampton County. Besides her husband and father, she is survived by three children and two brothers.

Hospital Alumnae Elects.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Mrs. Vincent Curcio has been elected president of the alumnae association of Lynchsburg hospital.

Other officers are: Vice presidents, Misses Elsie Sweeney and Madeline Rosser, secretary, Miss Mary Gowen; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Pugh; Misses Adelaide Reynolds, Christine Schmedhauser, Mary Fulks and Edna Howard, board members.

500 Millions More Sought To Save Homes

Sen. Trammel Amendment Would Increase Total to 700 Millions.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Park Trammell, (Democrat), Florida, yesterday introduced a bill to amend the home owners loan act to make available an additional $500,000,000 for cash loan to home owners.

Under the law $200,000,000 was made available for cash loans and the home owners bank was authorized to issue bonds to exchnge for mortgages held against homes.

He said the home owners bank had not sufficient funds "to make anything like the loans where cash is required."

"In a large measure," he told newspapermen, "the effort of the Home Owners Loans Corporation has been to have bonds used by the applicants for loans. Due to home mortgage holders not being willing to accept bonds in settlement of their mortgages, the system has not fully met the situation and it is for this reason I propose to help directly the home owners by enlarging the funds with which to make cash loans."

The Administration has made known that it favors Government guarantee of principl as well as the interest of Home Loan Bank bonds. At present the Government guarantees the interest and the principal is secured by mortgages taken over by the bank.

Student's Death Is Laid to Suicide

West Virginia Youth Was Found Shot at Home.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). A verdict of suicide was returned today in the case of Roy Glen Stuart, 24, a student last year at the University of Maryland in Baltimore. The body, with a bullet in the temple and a revolver alongside, was found yesterday at the home of his parents in West Union. A nervous breakdown was ascribed as the cause of the act.

Stuart attended West Virginia University three years before going to Baltimore. His father, Irvin Stuart, is a retired employe of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Bandit Shot Dead; Companions Flee

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 8 (AP).—One of three men who attempted to rob Myer Jacobson, of Portsmouth, in front of his home yesterday was killed when Jacobson defended himself with a pistol. The other two men escaped.

The slain man was identified as Carl D. Richardson, 39, of Norfolk, who has a long criminal record, consisting mainly of automobile thefts, dating from 1918.

Tygarts Valley Dam Survey Under Way

Grafton, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Henry Ransom, a Federal civil engineer, has begun a survey for selection of the site of the $3,000,000 dam to be built in the Tygarts Valley River, near Grafton, as part of the flood-control project in the Monongahela Valley basin.

Under the present program, 300 men wil be employed the first six months and the number will be increased to 2,000 as the work progresses. Bids will be opened here Saturday for core drillings.

Judge Coleman Disbars Cumberland Attorney

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Howard Galbreth, attorney of Cumberland, member of the last Maryland House of Delegates, has been disbarred from practice in the Federal courts of this district by Judge William C. Coleman.

Galbreth is charged with "unprofessional conduct." He did not reply to an order to show by December 7 why he should not be disbarred.

Maryland Killer Of Intruder Free

Exonerated for Shooting Man Entering House.

Centerville, Md., Jan. 8 (AP).—Wilson R. Tillery, of Baltimore, was exonerated yesterday by a coroner's jury of any blame in the fatal shooting of Olin Bordley, Negro, on Kent Island Saturday night.

Tillery said the cottage of his father had been entered and he decided to watch the place.

He said an intruder entered but, probably after seeing the glow of a cigarette, started to flee. Tillery said he fired once and later found Bordley fatally wounded. The Negro was said at the inquest to have had a long court record.

Masons at Strasburg Install New Officers

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—W. H. Johnston has been installed as worshipful master of Spurmont Lodge, A. F. & A. M., here. A. L. Vaughn, retiring master, conducted the installation.

Other officers include J. W. Stine, senior warden; C. M. Finch, junir warden; R. S. Wright, jr., senior deacon; E. L. McWilliams, junior deacon; E. B. Trainum, tiler; W. S. Funk, secretary; O. F. Pirkey, treasurer, and G. G. Moyer and C. B. Maphis, stewards.

GeorgeSmall Heads Waynesboro Lodge

Waynesboro, Va., Jan.8 (Spl.). Election of officers featured the first meeting of the two consolidated Junior Order lodges here. Those chosen were George Small, councilor; G. R. Almerode, vice councilor; J. E. Mullin, recording secretary; G. L. Brown, assistant recording secretary; J. F. Armentrout, financial secretary; G. E. Simmons, warden; G. T. Atkins, conductor; A. T. Halley and G. E. Roby, sentinals.

In the election of Armentrout as financial secretary a new record was established for continuous service in one office in that lodge in Virginia, this being his forty-second term.

Boy Gets 4 Years For Shooting Hobo

Stafford Youth, 17, Fired at Man on Freight.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Harry Pitts, 17, of Stafford County, indicted for the shooting of a Negro hobo last November, was sentenced to the State Reformatory for 4 years when found guilty this morning by Justice Robert H. Gray in juvenile and domestic relations court in Stafford.

Pitts was charged with firing at William Jackson, while the latter was riding on a freight train near Cool Spring. One of Jackson's eyes was so injured it had to be removed, while loss of sight in the other eye is threatened.

Pitts was first arraigned in Stafford circuit court this morning before Judge Frederick W. Coleman, who certified the case to the juvenile and domestic relations court for trial.

Dairymen Support Beck For Virginia Farm Post

Waynesboro, Va., Jan.8 (Spl.). C. Nelson Beck, Charlottesville, is favored by dairymen here for appointment as State commissioner of agriculture under the administration of Governor-elect George C. Peery. A resolution indorsing Beck has been forwarded to Mr. Peery.

Many farmers in this area have expressed preference for A. A. Holsinger, Harrisonburg, for the position.

Virginian Accused Of Jury Tampering

Danville Man Goes to Jail in Default of Bond.

Danville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Charged with attempting to bribe a corporation court juror, Frederick Allen was in jail today in default of $1,000 bond.

He is alleged to have approached J. B. Swann and to have asked him to "hang" the jury trying Lawrence and Ralph Summerlin, charged with violating the State liquor law.

Swann informed Commonwealth's Attorney George Bendall that he declined to discuss the matter with Allen but that on the following day Allen telephoned him, saying, "I have a present for you."

Drowned Motorist's Body Is Recovered

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 8 (AP).—The body of Jesse W. Ballance, of London Bridge, Princess Anne County, who was drowned Saturday night in North Landing River, has been recovered.

Norfolk County officers reported that Ballance's car skidded on a bridge and came to a stop after having torn away part of the railing. It was believed that, not realizing that he was on the edge of the bridge, he stepped out and fell into the river.

Alienation Claim For $15,000 Filed

Clifton Forge Merchant Love Suit Defendant.

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). E. O. Judy, of Petersburg, W. Va., has filed suit for $15,000 here against J. E. Hanlin, of Clifton Forge, charging Hanlin with alienating the affections of Judy's wife, Bessie V. Judy, who once lived here.

It is the first suit for alienation of affections ever filed here. It is on the docket for the February term of the city circuit court.

Hanlin is part owner of a chain of dollar stores in Virginia and West Virginia. About 18 months ago he married Miss Carrie Goldman, of Pittsburgh.

Bond Issue Victory Foreseen in Warren

Definite Rural Results Still Awaited.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). At closing time of the polls tonight it was conceded that Warren County's election would result in approval of both bond issues by small majorities.

The result will not be definitely known until rural precincts report. The rural vote is considered strongly against the courthouse bonds. The school loan has not encountered as strong opposition among rural voters.

King's Report Upholds Naming Commissioners

Favorable report on the nominations of District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen was made to the Senate yesterday by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

Senator King was given permission to present the report out of order and said he would ask Senate confirmation at the next executive session.

Driver Forfeits $127 In Hyattsville Court

Failing to appear in the Hyattsville police court yesterday to face charges of reckless driving and driving while intoxicated, Jesse O. Payne, 1510 Kenny street northeast, forfeited $127.90. He was arrested recently near Hyattsville.

Albert Paul, 4519 Fifth street northwest, and Augustus A. Mutten, Pawtucket, R. I., were fined $25 and costs each on traffic charges.

Services Conducted For Mrs. Lucy Foley

Berryville, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). Services for Mrs. Lucy Powell Foley, 42, who died in Winchester Saturday, were held here today.

Mrs. Foley was a daughter of the late William Henry Holliday, Clarke County farmer.

Dr. Welsh, U. of M., Appointed.

Dr. Mark Welsh, inspector in charge of live stock sanitary service of the University of Maryland, has been named State secretary for the American Veterinary Medical Association. He also has been appointed a member of the committee of arrangements for the International Veterinary Conference in New York.

Control Held Chief Factor In Agriculture

Dr. T. B. Symons Urges Cooperation With Administration.

America, it is believed, has entered upon a period in which controlled production of agriculture will be a dominant factor, Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service said yesterday.

Dr. Symons, addressing the annual extension service conference, in session at the university, continued by pointing out that America can not produce blindly without possibility of disposition at a profit to the grower. He urged cooperation in the programs of the National Administration.

Dr. C. B. Smith, assistant director of the extension service of the Department of Agriculture, predicted a farm licensing system unless farmers cooperate voluntarily in adjusting production.

Other speakers at the session included Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the university; E. L. Oswald, Paul Nystrom, and S. B. Shaw, of the University of Maryland; B. B. Derrick, Washington; I. W. Heaps, secretary of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association, and County Agents H. R. Shoemaker, J. D. McVean, H. B. Derrick, J. P. Brown and P. D. Brown.

The general session tomorrow will be addressed by M. L. Wilson and Norman J. Wall, of the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Frank B. Bomberger, president of the Baltimore Bank for Cooperatives. Representatives of the Maryland Farm Bureau and Grange also will speak.

Eight years and 250,000 MILES without a grumble!

That's Mr. Searl's Record on AMOCO-GAS

WE have never been able to get excited over the temporary triumphs or achievements of ordinary premium or regular gasolines.

Having written special motor fuel history with AMOCO-GAS—the original—we have always felt that the real story of AMOCO-GAS could best be told by years of use and accrued mileage.

For AMOCO users are and always have been loyal users. Mr. Searl's experience is typical. Read what he has to say in his letter at the right:

"Eight years and 250,000 miles without a grumble"—that's the way Mr. Searl sums it up.

And we are glad to be able to tell Mr. Searl that now as "AMERICAN" Marches Ahead he can get AMOCO-GAS from Maine to Florida, and inland.

Stop at the AMOCO Green Pump and ride out the facts for yourself.

GENTLEMEN:

THIS LETTER MAY COME AS A SURPRISE, (A PLEASANT ONE I HOPE) BUT THERE ARE TOO MANY KNOCKS AND NOT ENOUGH PRAISES IN THIS RUSH-ABOUT DAY OF OURS. I AM GOING TO SET DOWN IN WORDS WHAT I HONESTLY THINK.

MANY FRIENDSHIPS ARE NOT LASTING. THEY MAY MEAN WELL BUT DO NOT WEAR WELL. YOU KNOW THE KIND.

EIGHT YEARS AGO I ARRIVED IN WASHINGTON FROM THE WEST COAST AND WAS PROMPTLY INTRODUCED TO AMOCO-GAS. SINCE THEN I HAVE ENJOYED ITS FRIENDSHIP THROUGH SUMMER AND WINTER. WE HAVE TRAVELED TOGETHER OVER A QUARTER OF A MILLION MILES, IN A HALF DOZEN MAKES OF CARS, WITHOUT A GRUMBLE!

WITH OVER THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION MILES OF DRIVING, FROM MEXICO TO CANADA, WITH JULY DAYS IN DEATH VALLEY AND JANUARY DAYS IN THE CANADIAN MOUNTAINS, IN EIGHTEEN DIFFERENT CARS WITH ALMOST AS MANY NAME PLATES, YOU WOULD THINK I WOULD BE PARTICULAR! I AM! MY PURCHASES OF THOUSANDS OF GALLONS OF AMOCO-GAS PROVE IT.

I APPRECIATE THAT INTRODUCTION TO AMOCO-GAS AND ONLY REGRET IT IS NOT OBTAINABLE ALL OVER THE CONTINENT.

WITH SINCERE WISHES FOR YOUR CONTINUED SUCCESS.

VERY TRULY YOURS,

Russia's Ambassador.

Alexander Troyanovsky, Russia's first post-revolutionary Ambassador to the United States, tells interviewers that in assuming his new duties the problem of world peace is uppermost in his mind.

It is an auspicious text for a resumption of diplomatic relations which we all hope will prove enduring and beneficial to both parties. Relations between two of the greatest and most powerful of the world's nations must always be important in a way which transcends problems of merely mutual concern. In assuming his plenipotentiary post in Washington Mr. Troyanovsky shows due appreciation of its tremendous international significance.

The omens for the new ambassador's success are the better for having as his counsellor, in the technical as well as ordinary sense of the word, a colleague who has won much prestige during the difficult nonrecognition period. For many years, without formal status but with a generous supply of tact and common sense, Boris Skvirsky has labored for the end of normal relations now happily achieved. His continuation as an official envoy is to be welcomed with Mr. Troyanovsky's arrival to take charge of the reopened embassy.

Shooting To Kill.

Law enforcement officers, risking their lives to rid the country of murdering gangsters, have put three notches in their guns during the past few days.

"Handsome Jack" Klutas, university alumnus who turned to crime and became known to Federal agents as the "smartest" of nationally known crooks, was dropped while resisting arrest by police officers who had trapped him in a suburban apartment house near Chicago. He was the leader of a gang of bank robbers, kidnapers and killers.

Wilbur Underhill, the "tri-State terror" who was trapped at Shawnee, Okla., more than a week ago and shot while attempting escape, died in the State prison Saturday night. He was a narcotic addict, a bank robber, stick-up man and killer. Moreover, he was co-leader of the Bailey-Underhill gang and was in on the Kansas City station slaughter of four officers last summer. Bailey is in jail; Underhill dead and Elmer Inman, another member of the gang, was wounded and captured early Sunday morning near Seminole, Okla. Only four of the Southwest's major desperadoes are still at large, among them "Pretty Boy" Floyd, one of the most desperate of all.

The almost simultaneous death of two of the country's most noted criminals at the hands of the police indicates the relentless determination with which officers of the law are proceeding to reassert its authority. Nobody has a disposition to gloat over the violent death of fellow human beings, and the fact that such methods should be necessary is a terrible indictment of our civilization. But with gangsters of this type, resisting arrest with the ferocity of hunted wolves, society can not afford to temporize or compromise.

Archaic Government.

Gov. Lehman's plea to the New York Legislature for an overhauling of the obsolete machinery of local government has an appeal far beyond the borders of that State. Taxpayers in many States are suffering from "too many layers of government." Enormous municipal debts, the breakdown of the school systems in some cities, lax enforcement of law and excessive taxation, all testify to the inefficiency of local government over wide areas. Few more serious problems confront State Legislatures in their sessions this winter.

The present system of town government in New York, Gov. Lehman points out, is more than 200 years old and the plan of county government is still more ancient. Like most other States, New York is divided into a large number of counties, towns, villages and cities on which are superimposed numerous districts for the maintenance of schools, streets, lights, garbage service, &c. Most of these units employ the taxing power and maintain a full set of officials whose salaries make a heavy drain upon local revenue. For a great many of these officials the vicious system of compensation through fees is still in effect.

County government in New York is without any responsible executive head. Hundreds of petty officials are duplicating services rendered by other local agencies. Aside from the waste and inefficiency involved in such haphazard management of local affairs, Gov. Lehman finds that "it promotes a powerful invisible government which operates in its own way behind the actual scenes of government." Graft and corruption are no less inevitable results of archaic government than are excessive taxes and inefficient service.

Local governments ought to be overhauled in the light of present conditions. With transportation in its present high state of development there is no reason for the maintenance of half a dozen county governments where one would serve as well. Where cities have overrun several counties it is obviously absurd to preserve the useless skeletons of county government within the municipality. The urgent need is for centralization of responsibility and coordination of local functions, instead of trying merely to trim down the expense accounts of various independent and overlapping agencies.

What Lead From Washington?

In the Wilson day speech, in which he reaffirmed the doctrine of nonintervention in Latin-America, President Roosevelt said: "It is only if and when the failure of orderly processes affects other nations of the continent that it becomes their concern, and the point to stress is that in such an event it becomes the joint concern of a whole continent in which we are all neighbors."

This admirable declaration of mutual responsibility in this hemisphere is now recalled by the renewal of hostilities between Paraguay and Bolivia. Here is an unnecessary and senseless war in which "orderly processes" have failed in a way which calls for implementation of the President's fine words.

A League of Nations commission has been trying to arrange a peaceful solution for months. Failing to prolong the armistice it has suspended its efforts of conciliation and is preparing a report to the league. But, in view of Mr. Roosevelt's recent announcement of policy, Geneva will naturally and properly await a lead from Washington before taking any action which might be deemed unwelcome at the White House.

The Monroe Doctrine gives us a certain responsibility for peace and good order in this hemisphere. Aloofness from the League of Nations emphasizes our responsibility in American problems such as the protracted Bolivia-Paraguay war. We have laid down the principle that "from now on war by governments shall be changed to peace by peoples." It is now up to us to see that this fine gesture is not relegated to the sphere of empty oratory.

The Federation's Review.

In its annual survey of employment conditions, the American Federation of Labor has not merely emphasized the importance of encouraging private initiative, but has done so with a fervor that would do credit to the spokesmen of conservative economic thought. After reviewing and applauding the gains that have been made to date, the A. F. of L. says that these advances are "due almost entirely to Government measures, not to private initiative. In normal years business depends on private credit to finance its operations. During 1933 banks have not increased the volume of credit flowing to business; instead they have decreased it by about 6 per cent."

Instead of concluding that escape from the depression can be assured by a further expansion of Government loans, the A. F. of L. says emphatically that Government credit can not replace private credit extended in the normal way through banks, "barring a revolution in our way of doing business." Government lending is regarded merely as preliminary to resumption of private activities and the question is how to make the transition, in order to provide employment for the millions of workers who are still idle. The A. F. of L. believes that fear of inflation is the "chief obstacle to restoration of confidence among business men and investors." The way to raise prices is to "give business men confidence that their dollars will not depreciate in value."

Such monetary orthodoxy, coupled with affirmations of belief in the indispensability of private initiative will gladden the hearts of those who have feared that American labor is indoctrinated with ideas of social revolution. Philosophically, this document is devoid of even the hint of such yearnings.

On the theoretical side, however, the A. F. of L. review is weak in one important respect. Its anti-inflation warnings are directed exclusively against the issuance of fiat money, as the federation does not admit that the public credit may be stretched beyond the limits of safety, with consequent forced resort to inflation. This view of the elasticity of Federal credit is perhaps out of harmony with an otherwise well-balanced discussion. Nevertheless, there is a dawning perception of the direct connection existing between excessive borrowing and inflation.

A few months ago, some labor leaders appeared to think that a simple decision not to issue fiat money would guarantee immunity in this respect. The present report shows a better grasp of the intricacies of the monetary problem as well as a realistic perception of the importance of encouraging private initiative.

Mr. Collier's Policy.

By setting their approval upon it in a meeting here this week, representatives of various Indian organizations have materially furthered the policy favored by John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Significantly enough it is the first time that associations dealing with Indian interests have been in agreement upon a policy.

In the belief that the United States Government has been on the wrong track for at least 45 years, Mr. Collier advocates sweeping revisions of our old Indian policy. He is asking Congress, as an important step, to repeal the land-allotment law passed in the late eighties, under which acreage was parceled out to individual Indians. Mr. Collier contends that it has been an effective method of separating the Indian from his lands and of pauperizing him.

The commissioner proposes to return the lands to tribal control, so that they can not be divided. The individual Indian would have only life interest, as they had before the Government began to deal with the Indians as its wards, and life would be upon a communal basis. Mr. Collier hopes also to open up credit facilities to Indian agriculturists, now impossible to them because they can not contract obligations except by consent of the Secretary of the Interior. He plans a general restoration of Indian lands to Indians and a development of those lands through soil-building programs. Evidence is strong, he contends, that while there are a few exceptions, the Indian is primarily a farmer, and a subsistence farmer at that.

Mr. Collier believes, too, that our mistake has been in trying to educate the Indian to be a good American. He thinks that we should have been educating him to be a good Indian, and that in not doing so we have communicated vicious elements of our civilization while stultifying his opportunities for self-development. Under the new policy, there would be no massing of Indian students from different tribes for educational purposes. Children would be educated primarily in the handicrafts traditional with their tribes and allowed to develop without the regimentation of a white civilization. The Indians are to be given a greater measure of self-government as a necessary concomitant of the new policy.

The instances which have been cited are only details of a broader plan, which is to reverse a program that has been unsatisfactory, even to those who have tried to administer it humanely, and to embark upon another that as an elementary step recognizes the essential difference between the civilization of the Indian and the civilization of the white man and strives to develop them collaterally. Admittedly it is experimentation, but it is experimentation along a line which has been tried with success in Arizona and New Mexico, with the Navajos and Pueblo tribes.

Misleading Debt Comparisons.

At current rates of exchange the public debt of Great Britain approximates $45,000,000,000, including the war debt owing to the United States. Some apologists for our own debt-creating activities, maintain that if a country with a population of less than 50,000,000 can carry a debt burden of this size and look forward to a budgetary surplus at the end of the present fiscal year, the United States, with 125,000,000 inhabitants, has no cause to worry over the prospect that the Federal debt will reach $29,800,000,000 by the end of June.

Arguments of this sort are misleading because they are based upon incomplete data. They are dangerous, too, because they fail to allow for political and temperamental differences which make the practices followed in one country unsuitable to conditions prevailing elsewhere.

In the first place, a comparison between the public debt of the central government of Great Britain and that of our Federal Government takes no account of the indebtedness of local governmental units. These must be included in order to obtain a fair idea of the debt burdens resting upon the peoples of the two countries. Our State and municipal indebtedness, for example, is estimated to approximate $20,000,000,000, while the local public debt of Great Britain is calculated at less than $8,000,000,000 at current exchange rates. If these local obligations are added to the debts of the central governments, the total anticipated indebtedness of the United States by the end of the present fiscal year would fall only slightly below that of Great Britain.

Even these revised comparisons indicate that British taxpayers have to meet much heavier per capita debt charges than Americans. However, if we admit that our debt-contracting capacity, judged by British standards, is not yet fully exploited, it does not follow that it is economically or politically feasible to place equally heavy debt charges on American taxpayers. The 25 per cent normal income tax levied upon the British is one of the penalties which they must pay for creation of a national debt the service of which absorbs a large proportion of current revenue.

Allowance should also be made for the fact that the people of this country have to meet much heavier local tax bills than the British. Moreover, the per capita private debt of the United States is exceptionally high. Thus, it is clear that our Federal Government is not in a position to levy as high taxes on incomes as is the centralized British government.

The size of the national debt has severely handicapped Great Britain's efforts to meet the difficult social and economic problems of post-war reconstruction. Interest and sinking fund charges have absorbed huge sums which might have helped to hasten industrial recovery. Debt pressure is also largely responsible for retrenchments in social outlays which have caused much bitterness among the workers, and for gruelling taxes required to preserve the nation's credit and restore budgetary balance. Great Britain provides an encouraging example of what a resolute nation can do to maintain sound fiscal burdens to become equally crushing. staggering public debt. But the cost of that debt ought to warn us not to permit our fiscal burdens to become equally crushing.

Italy and Nordic Civilization.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was much interested in a recent article by Charles Edward Russell, apparently written in defense of the Italians in this country, in which to prove his point, he cited as examples the two distinguished American Italians, Mr. La Guardia, now Mayor of New York City, and Mr. Pecora, the able attorney for the Senate Banking Committee. Having seen both gentlemen in action, I could wish we had a million more Italians of the same caliber. But the phrasing of Mr. Russell's article would suggest that the several millions of Italians now in this country are of that caliber, which, of course, is a long way from the truth.

Further to buttress his thesis, Mr. Russell went to the pains to show that the background of all Nordic—as he called it—civilization is based on Italian civilization. With that one could take issue, unless anyway, Mr. Russell concedes, that all civilization of all time, started with Rome, which had its birth about 700 B. C. The Roman civilization, in fact, was in its infancy when Greece was in the flower of its greatness and from which Rome got most of its civilization. And in turn Babylonia and Egypt, then passing into slow decline after several thousand years of leadership, when Greece was leading the world in art, literature, philosophy, engineering skill, and the sciences of war and politics, had given to Greece the basis of their civilizations on which to build. Rome civilization at its best got its highest ethics and all its worthwhile religion from a wandering tribe of nomads far to the east.

I hold no brief for the Nordics, of which I am one, as Mr. Russell also says he is; still I am inclined to believe the Nordics are competent, citing, for instance, Mr. Russell himself as one who dares never to allow his light to be hid under the shadow of a bushel basket. Thor and Kris Kringle and Hitler are in the blood of amiable Mr. Russell, just as they are in that of Mr. La Guardia and Mr. Pecora, and was undoubtedly in Mr. Julius Caesar and those who preceded him.

GROVER AYERS.

"The Thinker."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several years ago I became interested in philosophical studies and attended meetings of a local society of that character, listening patiently to many learned papers, but was unable to make out what the authors were talking about. Thereupon I plunged into a course of reading, wading out deeper and deeper into the mire of philosophic thought. I became thoroughly discouraged, but brightened up when I came across the following lines of our former humorist, Hans Breitman:

"Und der Hegel said of his system
That only one man knew what the Teufel it meant.
Und der Jean Paul Richter said
God knows I meant some dings when erst this book I writ,
But God only knows what it means now,
For I have forgotten it."

I once saw a vaudeville team who were extremely funny. One was a chunky fellow who admitted he was a dumb-bell, but said his partner, Percy, was a thinker; just ask him any question and see. So Percy was asked a question, whereupon his chunky partner pounded him on the back, knocking the breath out of him, with Percy apparently struggling to think. The dumb-bell kept saying: "Think, Percy! Think hard!"

The writer relates the foregoing to relieve your readers who have been wandering in the commodity dollar wilderness and he wonders if our worthy President, whom we all like and admire, has to pound any of his thinkers on the back.

DUMB-BELL.

Home Owners' Parking Problems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to expose through the columns of your paper a condition that is very disturbing to many home owners. For an example, I am buying a detached house on a corner lot that has a 50-foot front and runs 104 feet on the side street.

In addition to payments on the property, I have real estate taxes and special assessments to pay. I recently paid $125 for opening streets more than a block distant and $95 for paving of street in front; also $68 for sidewalk along the north side of my home, while a much larger assessment is pending for the paving of a street along the other side.

Now my real complaint is that so many cars are parked at practically all times adjacent to my home that I rarely ever have the privilege of parking or picking up my family in front of my residence, which makes it necessary for us to enter and leave from the garage in alley.

I also have vacant houses, made so because the authorities have seen fit to establish a taxicab stand in front of them, which the tenants objected to, and moved out. This was in a residential section and the four houses are now standing idle.

Now it seems that we have sufficient police regulations to permit an officer to hand a ticket to a taxpayer most every time he parks his car, while thousands of cars that do not even buy D. C. tags seem to be exempt over indefinite periods of time.

Why not give thought to drafting regulations to eliminate all-night parking such as other cities have or devise some means that would permit property owners to drive up to their front door occasionally, as I frequently see cars parked at my front door for much longer periods than the 18-hour limit, some with D. C. tags and others with foreign tags, and there is nothing I can do about it. I recently asked a D. C. car owner who parked for long periods in front of my door to please park elsewhere. You would not care to publish his answer in your paper.

SOCRATES.

The Hobo and the Blue Eagle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nothing and nobody escapes the Blue Eagle's benevolent eye. Not even the hobo. Beginning with the new year, he, too, is to experience a "recovery massage" at the hands of one of the Administration's alphabetic magicians. No more roaming the highways or riding the rods for our genial, independent weary Willie. Such happy-go-lucky meanderings are henceforth verboten and, by highbrow edict, he is, on sight, to be promptly lassoed, meticulously deloused, reclothed in sweet-smelling garments, fed at public expense, corralled in comfort camps and—perhaps—induced to work!

While I wish publicity to congratulate our official philanthropists on this fresh and novel exhibit of their regimenting urge, I can not but feel that this money, spent on unappreciative subjects—in many cases—might be invested to greater advantage in cleaning up the malarious jungles of our criminal underworld. The hobo may be somewhat of a nuisance and, of course, an eyesore to professional eyes which would like to see humanity run by pure mathematics, but his tribe's cost to society sinks into total insignificance when compared with those criminal organizations which are reported to bleed our Nation annually to the unbelievable amount of thirteen billions of dollars!

Nor would it be so spectacular to invest that money in the upkeep of old and needy veterans. Instead, while the frowzy hobo is invited to the delousing station and given a "bawth," old vets are being "third-degreed" and given the "boot!" So we may assume that in the esteem of our highbrow apostles the criminal world is too big and tough to fight, the veteran is worn out and uninteresting, but the hobo—ah, here is a real and odorous novelty!

Personally I think one old fighting man is worth a carload of parasitic wayfarers! Let's pay our debts before we indulge in Santa Claus stunts where they are not wanted.

He Agrees With Mr. Gilbert.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please thank Mr. Frisbie Gilbert for his letter which appeared in The Post of December 29.

It is a clear, straightforward, fair and true statement and should appeal to all patriotic citizens. And thank you also for prihting it.

The Doctor Who Makes the King Well Wins the Battle the King Wins

By Robert Quillen.

In the bad old days, when the king was the government, the court jester was a privileged character who fared well and sometimes made his fortune.

In these better times, when the government is the people and commoners can afford the luxury of a laugh, the jester gets his living from the crowd. And still, if he knows his trade, he accumulates a fortune—and deserves it.

Laugh, said the ancient proverb, and grow fat. And the wisest of books declares that a merry laugh doeth good like a medicine.

Medical men tell why it does good. It moves the diaphragm and causes it to massage vital organs that function better as a result. Nature depends on laughter alone to perform certain necessary duties.

The laugh-maker, therefore, is a servant of mankind no less deserving of honor than the sage and the hero.

Will Rogers did not earn his millions by means of wisdom or knowledge or statesmanship, nor by his skill with a rope or his ability as an actor. He earned them by serving the people as Chaplin did by throwing pies.

He was born with the ability to make people laugh. It is a priceless gift, never to be acquired.

One born with a little gift can cultivate and improve upon it and eventually benefit mankind in a small way, but one born a solemn donkey may study and practice laugh-making for 20 years and remain no funnier than a coffin.

Born humorists defeat the purpose of their Maker when they devote themselves to other trades.

I have known two such—both preachers. Heaven rebuked them by making them flat failures in the pulpit, and the only success they ever achieved was when they made the congregation titter in spite of themselves.

The world needs laughter as it needs pity. And invariably it rewards its laugh-makers as it rewards few others.

If you have the gift, don't despise it and study for a more useful or more dignified role.

There is nothing more dignified than service and nothing under heaven more useful than a medicine to make the world forget its sorrows.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

SILVER ISSUE MADE CLEAR.

Popper, do you understand the silver coinage proposition?

Why, er, yes. It's just the old bimetalism issue.

What's bimetalism, popper?

Bimetalism is, er, well, er, it's something that always comes up under a Democratic administration.

But what's it mean?

It means a dollar will be redeemable in both gold and silver.

Where?

Oh, down at the mint, I guess. I think I hear somebody whistling for you outside.

* * * *

But the dollar is redeemable now in silver, ain't it, popper?

No, my son.

If I break a dollar I always get silver.

Yes, but the silver you get is good only because it is redeemable in gold.

But I thought we were off the gold standard?

We are. Look! The Jones boy is across the street yelling for you.

* * * *

If we are off the gold standard we must be on the silver standard, mustn't we, popper?

Nope. You see it's like this. We are sort of caught in between standards. It'll all be straightened out by Congress. Go on out and play.

President Roosevelt has come out for silver money, hasn't he, popper?

No. All he has done is to open the mints to the coinage of silver at 64 cents an ounce, at a ratio of 53 to 1.

In whose favor?

Princeton, with ten minutes left to play.

Well, if the silver is coined, it becomes money, doesn't it?

No. You see it isn't really coined. The mints just buy it to help the silver miners.

Haven't the silver miners been able to sell their silver?

Yes, but only for candlesticks, soup spoons, loving cups and things like that. Since the depression everybody's been using their old silverware instead of buying anything new, so the miners could only sell their silver to places like mints. Go on out and slide down hill.

* * * *

Will Congress let the silver be made into dollars?

Probably not, my son.

But if we're off the gold standard and Congress won't let us use silver, what kind of dollars will we have, popper?

Chromium or duralumin or something like that. And lissen.

What?

Gwan out and go skating! And pick a lake where the ice is very thin.

A PERMANENT PERCH.

As Elmer Twitchell understands it from the President's speech, American industry is to be a permanent cage for Blue Eagles.

Potato growers report an increased business due to the Mae West influence on feminine contours. The French pastry, ice cream, candy, pie and pudding trades also anticipate a break.

The automobile show is on in New York, indicating the manufacturers are unconvinced the country is going back to horses and buggies.

The quality of whisky now being sold to the American public is such that a Literary Digest poll tomorrow would show a strong trend toward prohibition.

Henry Drummond.

In July, 1887, with three of my classmates at Yale, I walked from New Haven to the White Mountains. It was a good hike, and took us about three weeks. On the way we stopped a few days at Northfield, Mass., where the great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, was holding a summer session for college students and others, who came thither from all over the world. On Sunday night we heard the British professor of geology, Henry Drummond, deliver at Mr. Moody's especial and urgent request, an address called "The Greatest Thing in the World," founded on St. Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians, Chapter XIII. It made a profound impression on the audience.

Not long after this he published it as a booklet, and it was translated into almost every language of the world. When I was bicycling through Europe in the summer of 1890, I saw it in the front window of every bookshop, always, of course, in the language of that particular country.

This book is the very essence of the Christian teaching, and all those who practice it would have more influence than oratorical eloquence.

That autumn of 1887 I persuaded Henry Drummond to come to Yale and speak every day to students and faculty. He was the most impressive speaker I have ever heard. He never raised his voice, he seldom made a gesture, he spoke in easy, conversational tones. But he was so effective that not only were many members of the faculty and many students "converted," but his influence at Yale lasted well into the twentieth century.

Today.

This is Time's one impartial gift to man,
This morsel of today—this tiny span—
This atom of Eternity—to use
For good or evil, as himself shall choose.
Already yesterday eludes his clasp.
Tomororw is not yet within his grasp.
Today alone is his, to make or mar
As he resolves, either to point a star
Mankind shall steer by, or to blot from view
A goal within the reach of me and you . . .
O Heaven help him, that he use aright
This one brief chance, ere it be lost in Night.

"Diplomatic Night" Cotillion Weaves Symphony Of Color, Magic Lighting and Intricate Dances

Flag-Festooned Ballroom Is Scene of Brilliant Social Function.

"Diplomatic Night," the second Washington Bachelors' Cotillion, which was given last evening was a very gay and colorful affair. At 10 o'clock the portals were opened and the guests filed in from the red, gold and ivory promenade of the Mayflower Hotel to the grand ballroom bedecked with the flags of all nations, with the flag of Czechoslovakia predominating. Rose shades cast a flattering light everywhere.

Mr. George H. Calvert, jr., introduced the guests to those in the receiving line, who were, Mme. Veverka, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, who was wearing a gown of silver lame trimmed at the neckline and on the briet sleeves with narrow bands of chinchilla, and a diadem in her hair. Beside her stood Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, who wore a smart gown of black satin.

Others in the line were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who wore a becoming gown of gold lace and slippers of bronze; Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King, was wearing a gown of white moire, faced at the bottom with deep green; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, who had on a gown of geranium colored velvet, made on severe lines with a slight train, and her jewels were diamonds and pearls.

A Symphony in Lights.

After an hour of dancing the scene was changed as if by touching the Genii's lamp. The rosy glow gradually faded out, leaving almost utter darkness. Then another touch of the lamp and the varying hues of the rainbow glided over the dancers, and the grand ballroom was turned into a veritable land of enchantment, suffused with shifting light, first blue, now green, changing into pale yellow, now rose, then lavender, and then blue once more.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Miss Liboria Cahorna and Mr. George Jamecek, in their Czechoslovakian costumes and carrying their country's flags, and Col. J. Miller Kenyon and Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, resplendent in military full dress, and each carrying the flag of the United States, marched to the center of the floor and stood facing each other, a representative of each country on either side. They formed an arch with their flags. Under this arch Mlle. Nella Veverka, with Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, led the cotillion into the first figure. The marchers carried streamers of the Czechoslovakian colors, white, red and blue. Miss Veverka wore a gown of gold lame, fashioned simply on the graceful off the shoulder pattern with a slight train, and a tiara of brilliants in her blonde hair.

The line passed the two tables, on either side of the orchestra, and the dancers received their favors. The gifts for the ladies were dainty silver bowls and the gentlemen received handsome picture frames of glass.

Cotillion Figures Please.

The figures had been well planned and were ably directed by Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, president of the Washington Bachelors; Col. Reginald L. Foster, secretary, and Mr. Wilton J. Lambert, who is a member of the board of governors of the Cotillion.

After the dancing of the figures there were foxtrots before supper was served at midnight. The menu included clear green turtle soup, creamed chiecken and fresh mushrooms served on ham, a salad, French cream, cakes and coffee. The supper was followed more dancing.

The Minister of Siam, His Serene Highness, Prince Damras Damrong, and Princess Damras, were among those present.

Other guests included the Minister of Nicaaragua and Senora De Bayle; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Lady Lister Kaye, Mr. Robert Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Eldon P. King, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Del Mar, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Bonham, Col. and Mrs. J. Miller Kenyon, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. From the Job of Bomber on a Submarine, Banton Rose to Glory as a Dress Designer

Couturiers' Stuffed Dummies End Tedious Dress Fittings

Clients' Figures Modeled in Cotton Mannequins Make Proxies.

Paris.—Long distance frock fitting and hair dressing is a new vogue here. Instead of passing long hours in fitting rooms and hair dressing salons, many fashionables are settling the matter of new frocks and fresh coiffures by proxy.

Americans, who have long bemoaned the time spent in Paris fittings, have found the answer to their wardrobe worries in stuffed mannequins made by Ardanse, a designer here.

She takes the measures of her clients' figures, makes a "toile" (cotton) form to fit it and pads it until it exactly meets the measurements of the woman whom it represents. It is mounted on a pole with the shoulders the same height from the ground as those of the client and stored in the basement of the house with scores of other stuffed mannequins.

When a smart client orders a frock, the fitter calls to an errand girl below "Bring up Madame X." The stuffed replica is placed in the fitting room, the frock fit and sent to the client without her having seen anything but the original model and the sample from which she chose her fabric.

Chic Parisiennes who are spending their holidays in the country and who can't get to Paris to keep their coiffures in shape are wearing toupees and sending them up to town to have them dressed by their favorite hairdressers.

The toupees are generally the exact color of the wearer's hair and are dressed just as she wears it. Most women wear them only at night.

"Back from the face" is the rule for the latest coiffures, as well as the latest hats. Smart Parisiennes are combing their hair softly back from their faces to give the wind-swept effect so much in vogue.

Designer Says The Homemade Gown Is Best

She Means, of Course, Made in America, and for the Wearer.

"What this country needs is more well-dressed women."

The propounder of this bit of philosophy flipped the ashes from a cigarette and crossed her shapely ankles. Her long blue eyes narrowed with laughter.

Known to smart Washington in prewar days as Miss Bert, designer of Washington-made gowns that were the last word in distinction, today she is, in private life, Mrs. Stephen Paul Nemetch, wife of the Chicago aviation inventor. She has returned to Washington to make her home, and to design, once more, gowns of the type that brought her recognition.

"I'm for gowns made at home," she said. "At home in the National sense, and at home, if you like, in the actual sense. I believe a dress designer can go infinitely further in creating gowns which express the personality and character of her client, when she has seen that client against the background of her own home and her own life, than when she studies her detached from her own surroundings.

"A woman's wardrobe is without distinction if it fails to meet and to express every nuance and every need of that woman's interests and activities. To arrive at that, you must know your woman.

"I'm dedicating myself, in this renaissance of my professional life, to the purpose of making women wear out their old clothes. Why? Because I think it strikes a real depression note! In the home of every woman of any pretension to smartness, there are one to half a dozen dresses hanging idle in the closet. When clients come to me for new things, I preach the practicability of rejuvenating and getting the good out of what she may already have on hand. Let her give the difference to her pet charity!

"You know," she interrupted herself suddenly, "I never really liked women, until the depression. But I've seen so many of them struggling so gallantly with one problem and another the past four years, that I've had a complete change of heart."

In the studio she is opening, Mrs. Nemetch—or Miss Bert, as she prefers to be known—is employing only women recruited from the ranks of the too-long unemployed.

"I want to give the educated woman, unemployed through no fault of her own, an opportunity to reestablish herself. If she wants to learn the dress design craft, she has that opportunity. If not, she will at least be brought into contact with the people she's accustomed to knowing. I have a surprising waiting list. Charming girls and women, willing to sew on buttons or snaps, put in hems or pull threads, just to be a member of the fortunate working class."

It was as a convent schoolgirl, studying with the nuns at Mount de Sales Convent, outside Baltimore, Md., that Mrs. Nemetch first became fascinated with sewing and dress design. Born and reared in Baltimore, niece of the late Dr. Frank Martin, one-time head of Johns Hopkins Hospital, she studied at Mme. La Fabre's French School on leaving the convent.

"There I learned how to roll a lettuce leaf on a fork. They don't do it any more. And you can't make a living at it," she laughed. "Somewhere along the line, but not there, I managed to assimilate a great deal of miscellaneous information about dress design. Russian, French and Czechoslovakian methods especially fascinated me.

"One thing I learned for myself. It's that a black flat crepe dress is just about the smartest, most satisfactory utility gown that a depression-hit woman can have. Cause why? Because, with a few removable collars, you can make it business, afternoon or dress-up. Even with detachable sleeves, it can be a sort of dinner dress, either sleeveless or with extra-fancy full ones.

"Of course, the length is a ticklish matter. If it's going to serve every purpose, it ought to be about eight inches from the floor. And that doesn't make a dinner dress. But a woman with only one dress isn't likely to have many formal dinner engagements, is she?" Her eyes filled with laughter again.

Best Dressed Actress List Raises Furor

Hollywood Storm Breaks Over Stylist Who Names Six.

Hollywood, Jan. 9 (U.P.).—Feminine Hollywood's in an uproar—all because of a woman.

Gwen Wakeling, stylist for the new Twentieth Century studio, was brave enough to say "there are only six best dressed women in Hollywood."

And, to make the situation more interesting, she named the six.

They are Constance Bennett, Marion Davies, Norma Shearer, Hedda Hopper, Joan Crawford and Lilyan Tashman.

After the storm of protest which followed this announcement had died sufficiently, she explained that she meant women who have the talent required for invariably perfection in dressing, if they are left to their own resources and are not aided by stylists.

Hollywood's outraged feminine fashion plates are professing to find the usual feline malice in the fact that their critic is of their own sex, but some still think she was pretty brave, at that.

The Sombrero Felt.

Marion Davies, one of the six, has introduced the "sombrero felt" to the film city. This hat, exclusively for suit wear, is of beige felt, with wider than usual brim, whence it gets its name. A dashing black band encircles half the crown and then rises in a deep slant across the crown to end in a cluster of curled feather tips.

Jeanette MacDonald persuaded studio officials to let her wear her own "prettiest nightgown" in the boudoir scene in her latest picture. It is made of flesh crepe, rich with lace. The bodice of the gown is cut-out and here are some color tips for red-heads which she's passing along. First, black, then all blues, then yellowed-greens and much brown with golden lights.

Florine McKinley is certainly stealing the glory as a "stylesetter." Her latest sensation is the "brassette" suit, made of gay yellow knit material with white straps tied in bows on the bare back, like a modern brassiere.

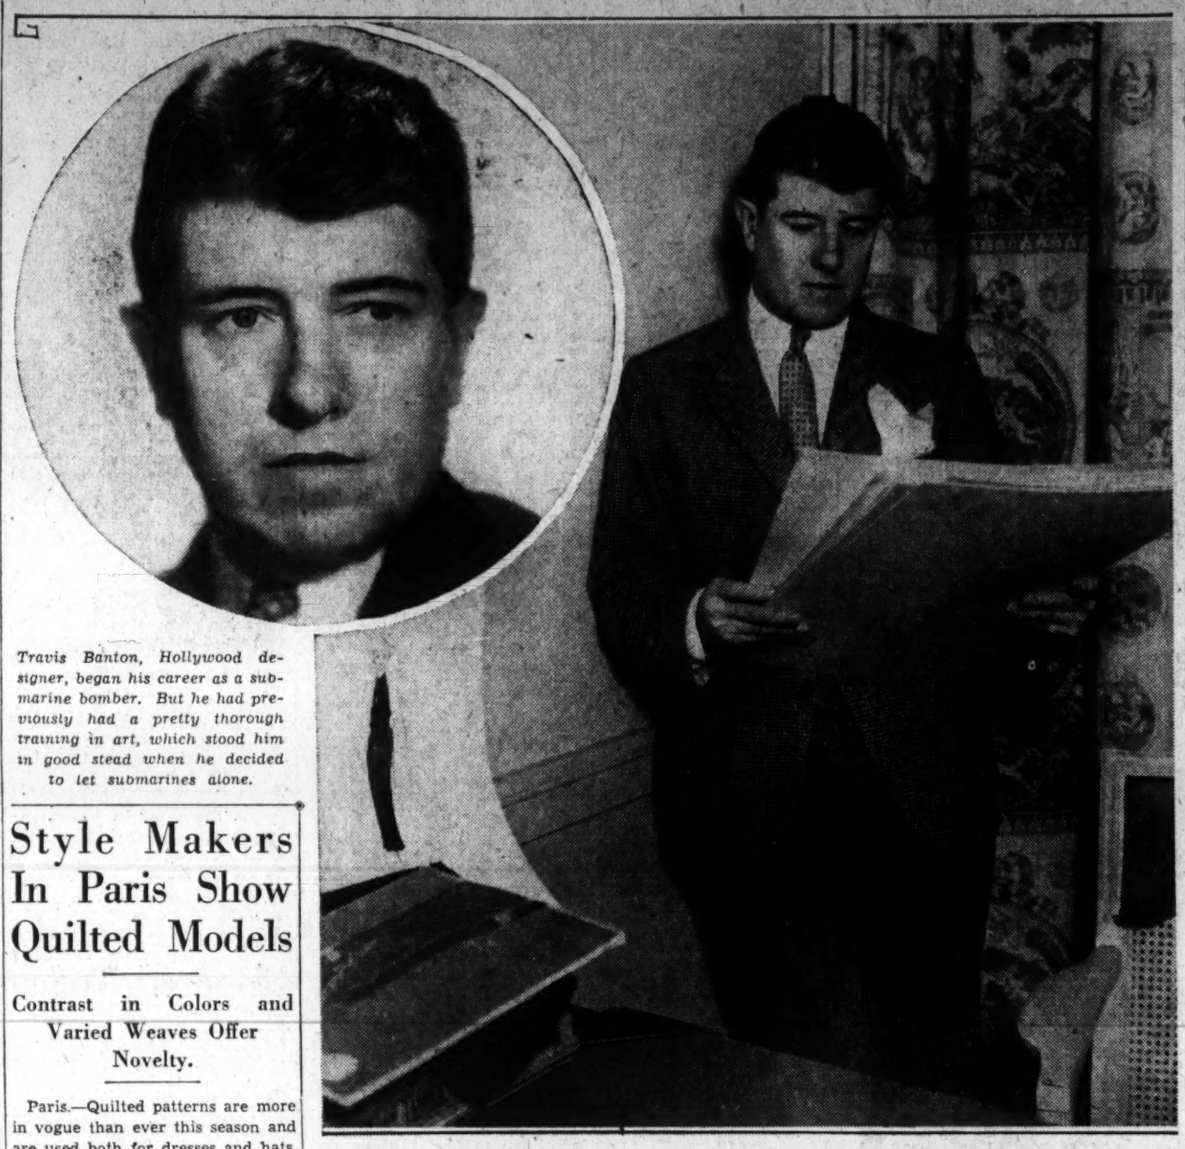
Braided Bob Is Infectious.

The braided bob, used by Joan Crawford in "Dancing Lady," is also being seen in all "the" places these nights.

Here's a way to utilize that "slightly used" black frock, left over from last year. Just wear a pinafore over it. That is, make an apron of brightly colored plaid that ties tightly in the back to give a waistline and boasts of a fetching bow at the neck.

You'll like it. Jean Connors, recent New York importation, does this.

And, from Jean Harlow comes word that long bobs are passe. To prove it, she had three inches cut off her own platinum blonde tresses a couple of days ago.



Travis Banton, Hollywood designer, began his career as a submarine bomber. But he had previously had a pretty thorough training in art, which stood him in good stead when he decided to let submarines alone.

Style Makers In Paris Show Quilted Models

Contrast in Colors and Varied Weaves Offer Novelty.

Paris.—Quilted patterns are more in vogue than ever this season and are used both for dresses and hats. We have already mentioned the success of quilted patterns for short or three-quarter evening coats. Lanvin has models in dull rayon velvet that are entirely quilted. The new quilted effects are no longer rigid and heavily stuffed. They are made to give an impression of ribs, either straight or waved, chevrons, scallops or saw teeth. All the designs are disposed to give suppleness to the material and the quilted effects are often separated with rayon stitches.

Quilted designs are, in many cases, used to make a contrasting yoke, sleeves or gilet on a dress. For instance, a black dress will very often show green sleeves or a mulberry dress mauve sleeves, or a brown dress vermilion red sleeves and bodice trimmings, with the quilted embroidery enhanced with rayon stitchings in the same contrasting color as the dress itself.

On hats either in dull or bright rayon velvet or in very finely ribbed rayon crepe, these quilted embroideries are extremely smart and becoming. They are disposed in concentric and irregular circles or else in waved or triangular patterns, according to the shape of the hat. Patou has a very successful rayon beret which is divided into quarters, some in plain effect and some showing triangular quilted designs.

Significant Amateur Dramatic Movement Is Work of Dominican Order in the Capital

Black Friars Guild Write and Act Their Own Plays.

One of the most significant dramatic movements in the country, the Blackfriars Guild, entirely under the direction of members of the Dominican order, will present its first play of the season tonight in St. Dominic's Auditorium. The production is the Washington premiere of "Catherine the Valiant," the historical drama of Catherine of Siena, famed Italian Joan of Arc of the fourteenth century.

The script is the work of Father Urban Nagle, and the costumes were made by nuns in the Dominician convent. Members of the order helped with the stage settings and lighting effects, and even printed the programs and photographed scenes from the play.

Backed by Tradition.

The very name Blackfriars calls up a wealth of romance and tradition. The Dominican Monks were first called Blackfriars in England, because of their black robes. From the beginning the organization as established by St. Dominic aimed to appeal to the educated people, and to encourage the best in all arts. This ideal has been kept alive throughout all their centuries of growth.

The Blackfriar Theater was one of the most famous of the Elizabethan era. There Shakespeare, Christopher Marlowe and many other famous playwrights of the day first produced their plays, and talked over their production in friendly fashion. It is possible that even today the tormented ghosts of Hamlet and Dr. Faustus haunt that familiar site.

Yesterday, Father Nagle, founder of the guild, outlined his plan for an active dramatic organization, sponsored by the church, and center of all the best in the dramatic world.

"The modern theater had it's beginning in the church," he said. "The earliest plays in the Christian era were written, directed and acted by priests within the church itself. These were known as mystery or morality plays, and were used as a medium to teach the people. Gradually the church was divorced from the press and later they became violently antagonistic."

Church and Stage Allies.

"Today there is no reason why the church and the theater should fight against each other. The dramatic instinct in all of us is too strong to be suppressed. During all the years when the church and theater have been alienated the drama has been kept alive in the pageantry and ceremony of our services.

"In the future the church and the theater can be reunited for their mutual benefit. At present there is much cheap vulgarity in the theater. This is not so much the fault of the public, or the actor, as of the producer.

"The theater can be used as a medium to bring beauty and high idealism into the lives of every one. It can play a constructive part in the building of the great characters upon which the future of the world depends. But this sublimation of the theater can be accomplished only by amateurs. The professional theater is too dependent upon box-office receipts.

"The organization of the Blackfriars in Washington is the first step in the world-wide theatrical organization toward which we are working.

Hold Dramatic Classes.

"This organization has a definite policy in dramatic education. We begin each year with a series of lectures, planned to encourage an open mind, and to instill an appreciation of the finer phases of the drama. We give classes in dramatic instruction, and produce several bills of one-act plays, and at least three full-length productions yearly."

Father Nagle said that the Blackfriars use the guild method because in that way every one in the group gets a chance to do something different, and thus acquires a fuller knowledge of the theater.

Plan National Effort to Encourage Art of Theater.

"We believe in working with other amateur organizations," Father Nagle said, "because only in that way can anything lasting in the way of a great theater be accomplished.

"We are planning to establish chapters of the Blackfriar Guild all over the country, and in the other countries where the Dominican order has workers. The New York Chapter has already been established.

"The members of these guilds will work under the direction of the priests. The basic philosophy of this organization will be that the theater must express the best that is in the human race, and must make people think.

"We are planning for the members of the various chapters to exchange original manuscripts among themselves, to exchange scenery and actors, to keep from growing static because of the constant influx of new material and new ideas.

"This will not be a church theater," Father Nagle continued. "It will be a world theater, and all the world will be our stage. It is a glorious plan for a glorious future. We are doing everything in our power to make it an actuality."

"Sight-Saving" Classes Help Thousands of Nearly Blind

Classes Using Big Print for Study Organized 20 Years Ago.

Cleveland, Jan. 8 (AP).—The idea of conserving in public schools what little eyesight some children are able to bring to their books was conceived in Ohio 20 years ago—and today congratulations are still pouring in on those who have fostered the movement through the years and have seen it grow Nation-wide.

R. B. Irwin, now executive director of the American Foundation for the Blind in New York, started the first "sight saving" class in a Cleveland public school. He saw the tragedy of classifying as blind, children who see a little more than complete darkness.

Living in Cleveland and fresh from Harvard in 1913, Irwin thought the State could not afford to ignore these pupils of imperfect vision.

Movement Widespread.

He drew up a bill, which, sponsored by the Cleveland Board of Education and passed by the Ohio Legislature, enabled any city to establish "sight saving" classes.

There now are 20 such classes in Cleveland, 66 in Ohio and 430 in the Nation.

A teacher of the blind, Irwin realized that children with partial vision aren't at home with the totally blind and are out of place with schoolmates of normal vision. What has happened in Ohio and in other States is largely due to this realization.

Benefactor Now Blind.

In a "sight saving" class the pupil reads three volumes of "Treasure Island" in 24-point type instead of one volume in 10-point. In Cleveland he reads five volumes of geography in large type instead of one. He is encouraged to write a large, bold hand. He uses a soft, black pencil and a piece of chalk the size of a hammer handle.

Graduates of the classes in Cleveland turn up in modern life as musicians, insurance salesmen, gasoline station attendants, newspaper reporters, law students, factory hands and farmers. Some of them can't see 5 feet ahead without glasses.

Perhaps, Irwin, now living in New York and engaged with other problems, would be delighted to see what Ohio has done with his "sight saving" idea. But Irwin, saver of thousands of eyes, is blind.

Feather and Film—But Sleek, Too

A Banton gown, all in black, that is as soft and filmy in appearance as it is sleek and molded to the outlines of the figure. The material is transparent velvet with fur.

He's an Athlete in Physique, A Wizard in Creating Styles

Born in Texas, Brought Up in New York City, He Joined the Navy When War Was Declared; But After it Was Over Went Back to a Drawing Board.

Clothes—and the glamour of the movie stars. When you put those two things together you can not fail to have something that spells romance with a capital letter.

In this, the eighth of a series on the world's famous dressmakers, is told the story of one who made good in the film capital of the West.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

From the hazardous business of planting bombs in the ocean's depths to the comparatively safe occupation of putting ostrich frills on Mae West's glued-to-the-figure gowns is the history of Travis Banton, Hollywood designer. This robust Westerner who has the face of a village ice man and the shoulders of a football player, makes the glamorous costumes of Marlene Dietrich, Carole Lombard, Miriam Hopkins and Sylvia Sidney, in addition to planning furbelows for the flamboyant Miss West.

The mine-planting episode occurred in the World War when young Banton was bounced around the various oceans in a submarine destroyer. In those days icy waves drenched him as he released dangerous explosives from the deck of the small boat. Now warm praise from the cinema stars engulfs him as he stands in his luxurious studio, cutting and draping exquisite silks and gossamer laces.

When Travis Banton was a husky little boy in Waco, Tex., he was much more interested in Indians and cowboys than in what the well-dressed young woman was wearing. He would undoubtedly have kicked and screamed with rage if anyone had dared to suggest that when he grew up he would make his living as a dressmaker. Even now, after ten years of making clothes for the movie queens, he hates that term "dressmaker" and insists that he is a costume designer who does meticulous research in an effort to present clothes that are suited to the type of picture, the needs of the actress, and the demands of the producer.

To New York.

When he was 6 years old Travis Banton moved with his parents from Texas to New Mexico. Two years later the family moved to New York, where his father, R. B. Banton, had accepted a position with a banking house.

Travis attended the New York public schools and then went to Columbia University for two years. According to his story, he flunked magnificently in every course. At any rate, his banker father decided to send him to art school, to keep him busy. Travis liked art school. He spent a happy year at the New York Art Students' League, followed by a year in the School of Fine and Applied Arts. It was at the latter that he studied designing. He was in school when the war broke out. Young Banton put away his drawing board and enlisted in the Navy.

After the necessary training period at Newport, he went sailing over the bounding main with bombs at his elbow. This continued until March, 1929, when he was discharged from the service. Instead of going back to school he looked for a job. Mme. Frances, who was then New York's most successful dressmaker, gave him part-time work as a fashion designer. Incidentally, Mme. Frances has since retired with an estimated fortune of $3,000,000.

On a Shoestring.

But Banton had definite ideas of his own. It was difficult for him to submerge those ideas while working for someone else. He had not been with Mme. Frances long when he started in business for himself on the proverbial shoestring. The young man from Texas with the shoulders of a football player prospered at designing beautiful gowns.

When he realized that he had definitely found his metier, he went to Paris, where he spent a year studying the methods of the French haute couture.

Upon his return to New York he continued working independently, and gradually built up a smart clientele. He also costumed several shows. Then he began to cast languishing glances in the direction of Hollywood. One day he happened to tell his physician that, since he had been successful in costuming shows, he believed that he could design for the screen.

The physician said nothing to Banton. But he had a patient named Will Hays and he did tell the movie czar about this young man from Texas who longed to exchange Manhattan's skyscrapers for Hollywood's purple hills.

Toward Hollywood.

The doctor must have been a good salesman. Without ever having seen Mr. Banton, Mr. Hays sent the designer a note of introduction to Walter Wanger, an executive at one of the mammoth Hollywood studios. Mr. Wanger was so favorably impressed that he immediately sent the designer to California to do the costumes for "The Dressmaker of Paris." That was ten years ago and Travis Banton is still working for the studio that made that picture. Recently, however, he was borrowed by another studio to costume Anna Sten, German star, who will shortly make her debut in this country.

Although he is responsible for the Mae West fripperies, this designer customarily makes exceedingly smart and urbane clothes. He believes that the West pictures popularized and crystallized a mode that had been almost four years in progress so that America was more or less prepared for a vogue of elegance and luxury. He also believes that our sentimental attitude toward the return of the "good old days before prohibition" played an important part in the wildfire spread of the Mae West vogue.

Sub-Deb Frocks Have Trains and Decolletes, Too

New Models Named 'Sugar,' 'Junior,' 'Honey Chile,' and 'Nice Girl.'

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—No longer need the subdeb complain because her big sister has all the expressive clothes.

Unusual privileges await the subdeb in the spring season. She may, for instance, have a small train on her organdy party frock and a fairly low back, too.

One New York designer, Gladys Parker, is giving all her attention to the subdebs—the girls from 11 to 17, with slight, young figures—and to the "junior" woman, who finds it so hard to be fitted.

Each frock has a name. An embossed pink organdy party dress with a little "young" train is dubbed "Sugar." It has blue grosgrain bows here and there and the "V" decolletage is outlined by a frill.

"Nice Girl" is a demure mulberry crepe daytime dress—the type for a slim little coed. Its skirt is box-plaited, the waistline is high and pink taffeta bows tie the sleeves.

Another daytime dress has pleated pockets and is called "Anytime Annie." A dotted organdy with a frilled skirt brushing the floor is named "Honey Chile."

The charm of this collection is the combination of simplicity and sophistication.

A Sheen That Is Like the Snow

White Shoes Dominate Spring Fashion Demand

St. Louis, Jan. 7 (AP).—White shoes for spring for both men and women was the trend shown today in advance buying by retailers, here for the opening of the annual convention of the National Shoe Retailers Association tomorrow.

Wholesalers reported advance buying from stocks on display in the larger St. Louis hotels was heavier today than in several years.

Artist Leaves Estate For Care of Animals

Norwich, Conn., Jan. 8 (AP).—Fresh evidence of the love he bore for animals is contained in the will of Henry Singlewood Bisbing, whose paintings of animal life brought him international recognition.

Filed in the probate court at Ledyard today, the will provides for the ultimate division of his entire estate between the Penn Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of Philadelphia, and the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Boston.

Cheap Camera Provides Foil For Breakage

Photography Experiments Possible for Boys at Low Cost.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Ambitious youngsters who have the yen but not the wherewithal to be amateur photographers will find they can get a world of fun, and learn a lot about taking pictures, from the small inexpensive play cameras featured this week in a local novelty shop.

Parents have a way of taking it for granted that Junior is going to break up all of his toys whether he likes them or not. They have a way of thinking there's no use buying him anything nice that is breakable. So Junior pines, and aspires to own watches and cameras.

Now, however, parents can take 49 cents and buy Junior a camera he can experiment with, and if he breaks it it they aren't out much.

Crystal Earrings.

There was just something about those earrings which caught our eye. They were down at the bottom of the show case, half hidden by an enormous blue bracelet, but as we walked past we looked down and saw them. The clerk brought them out for us and laid them on a black velvet square on the counter so we could see them better.

Small round crystal balls were suspended from delicate silver chains. As they dangled from the lobes of the ear the chains were almost imperceptible, and the crystal balls looked as though they were suspended there in midair. The effect is altogether delightful.

Three Scotchmen.

Three comic Scotsmen's heads are fastened on to round, substantial corks to fit the top of the bottle of Scotch. The manager of the shop laughed when we inquired about them and asked if he sold a lot of them, and to whom.

He told us that elderly men, obviously with bounteous means at their disposal, would wander into the shop to "look around." Inevitably when they saw the three faces, one with an ear to ear grin, one with a thunderous frown, and the third with wide-open eyes and mouth expressing complete amazement, they chuckled to themselves, fingered them a bit, and ended up by buying them.

A Collar for Spring.

An F street shop, one of the first in town to boast a supply of spring neckwear, is displaying a white chalk crepe collar with the ascot lines. The neck bank fits high around the throat with a decidedly flattering effect. A jabot, split like a fish's tail, starts high at the throat. Two rows of buttons line either side of the split.

This collar is tailored and dressy. The simplicity of the cut combined with the extreme ascot touch adapts it to almost any kind of frock.

Mae West—Again!

Mae West heard rumors of it first; then the stores heard rumors of it; and then we did. And all at once rumors materialized and there it was—a perfume expressing all the goodness of the Mae West heart, all the allure of the Mae West personality, and all the excitement pent up in her deep, full voice.

Isn't it a fad? We were anxious to know! Mae West laughed and asked "How-can-ya-tell?" The manufacturers emphatically shook their heads. The dealers said that they thought an exotic scent with lasting qualities, keep public favor.

So, all we know is, it's here, a really lovely fragrance, to last as long as we like it.

More Zest for Wine.

The wine sets in a downtown store are lovely enough to make even poor wine taste a little better than it is. A triangular-shaped decanter is accompanied by six little glasses, delicately tinted in orchid, blue, rose, amber, chartreuse, and olive. Each glass has a heavy crystal bottle to insure its flimsiness against upsetting easily.

The decanter and the six glasses come in a plain chrome tray which reflects the dainty colors of the glasses and accentuates their loveliness.

Double Utility Brooch.

At first glance they appear to be rhinestone brooches. At second glance they still look like brooches. But at third glance, which is somewhat of a scrutiny, it becomes apparent that here indeed is a brooch but something else besides. The main part of it can be slipped from the nontarnishable frame and unclapsed to form two attractive evening clips.

Just as easily as the brooch can be taken apart it can be put together again.

Contrast in Beads.

Sport bracelets which are combinations of chrome and wooden beads take the season's prize for being the most unusual trinkets.

The wooden beads are colored a reddish brown, and the chrome beads, exactly matching in size, are bright and shining. Bracelets of this sort, while on account of the wooden beads are called sport bracelets, may be worn on other occasions, too.

Glories of Corn Cookery Date Back to Time of Indians

By Ann Barrett.

Meal-time in the tepee of an early American Indian. Meal-time in a 1934 dining room. A far cry between the two, but there may be this thing at least, in common: corn meal. Maybe corn meal in a simple cake or pone (made without leavening and baked deliciously crisp and brown) as authoress Fanny Heaslip Lea remembers it from childhood days in New Orleans.

Or maybe corn meal in some more pretentious role. Say the way Authoress Faith Baldwin likes it: In a full-meal dish of fried mush, pork sausages and syrup. Or with buttermilk and plenty of eggs in a deep spoon bread such as Blair Niles has found nothing to beat, in all her world explorings. Or in corn meal spider bread—that fascinating cross between spoon bread and corn bread. Or in that famous New England dessert—spicy, custardy Indian pudding. Or in muffins, waffles, pancakes, fritters.

Tips on Corn Meal.

There's practically no end to the whoopee you can make with corn meal! With either the coarser, softer meal from white corn (known as water-ground) which wins most favor in the South. Or the finer, goldeny corn meal liked better, as a rule, in the North. For true Southern effects with corn meal, omit sugar. (Water-ground corn meal has a natural sweetness.) And in case you're just learning to like corn meal, you'd probably best start with a fussier sort of corn bread in which the corn meal is mixed with white flour. Generally speaking, only a veteran corn-mealer appreciates the delicious graininess and flavor of corn meal undiluted.

To start with corn meal in a simple recipe, here's hasty pudding—a nicer name for corn meal mush. Long cooking is the secret of making it extra good. First put 1 quart (4 cups) boiling water in a heavy pot or top of double boiler. Add 1½ teaspoons salt. Then very slowly (so as not to stop boiling and make lumps) stir in 1 cup white or yellow corn meal. Stir till mixture thickens. Then set over hot water (if you've used double boiler), cover and cook at least 1 hour. (This way you can cook it the day before you want it, and warm it up.) If you've used a heavy pot (iron is fine) cook over low fire (stirring occasionally) about 45 minutes.

Serve that up (for breakfast or supper) with rich milk or cream and sugar—and it'll be eating. Or serve it with brown sugar or butter. Or with maple syrup. To make it extra rich and nourishing, you might make it with milk instead of water. Add chopped dates, if you'd like an extra flourish.

Fried Mush.

Once you've made your mush or hasty pudding (made with milk or part milk it browns better) you're all set for fried mush. Next step is to turn it into a pan (first rinsed in cold water, but not dried.) Cover it with waxed paper to prevent its forming dry crust, and let stand till molded. Then (if you've used square pan, say 7 by 7) cut into square or diagonal pieces. Or (if you've used loaf pan) cut into half-inch slices.

If you like your mush to have a delicate crust, then just brown it slowly as it is, in hot lard, drippings or other fat. For a thicker crust and more even browning, first dip slices (or pieces) in flour. For a still thicker, crispier crust, dip mush first in flour, then in beaten egg, then in fine crumbs.

If you like, fry your mush in deep fat, heating it first to the point where it will brown an inch-cube of soft bread in 40 seconds. (Because the mush is more likely to break apart when fried this way, you might take the extra precaution to mix 2 tablespoons flour with the cup of corn meal when you first cook it.)

Corn Bread, Northern.

For a nice rich and light corn bread with a hint of sugar in it, search no farther — this is it. First sift together 1 cup corn meal, 2-3 cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon soda. (If some of the corn meal doesn't go through the sifter, be sure to add it to mixture afterward.) Next, beat up 2 eggs, add ¾ cup sour milk or buttermilk to them, and 1 tablespoon melted fat (bacon fat, lard, butter, or whatever.) Then stir this into first mixture, turn into a well-greased square pan, and bake at 400 degrees F. about 20 minutes. Serve hot with plenty of butter.

To make this into what many people call Johnny cake, use ¼ cup molasses in place of the sugar (mixing this with the milk and eggs) and increase the flour to 1 cup.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The rapid development of chemistry and chemical engineering and the increasing application of chemistry to industry has one disadvantage group of diseases including scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, smallpox, mumps, influenza, the pneumonias, and the common colds, and probably infantile paralysis. The list includes many others.

The microbes of these diseases are carried by currents of air from the faces of the sick and the carriers to the upper breathing apparatus of those who are capable of contracting the diseases.

The wish to filter the germs out of the air currents running from the nose and mouth of the sick to the same organs in the susceptible has resulted in more than a score of face masks and plans for using them.

Drs. M. L. Blatt and M. L. Hale, after elaborate experiments with the several masks designed by physicians, surgeons and nurses, devised one that they think fills the specifications. It is constructed on a new principle. It consists of layers of gauze between which cellophane is placed. The mask covers the nose and mouth and is held in position by loops of tape passing around the ears. The tape holds the mask against the upper and lower parts of the face but leaves openings at the side through which breathing air enters and leaves. The principle is deflection of air currents instead of filtration of air.

Penthouse Ice Boxes Carry Nibbler's Bits

The Kitchenette Is Ever Ready to Supply a Light Lunch.

The vogue for tiny penthouses and small apartments continues to be increasingly popular for the newly-weds, the young business women, and the college men who boast of questionable culinary triumphs in their diminutive kitchenettes. Here, hidden in Lilliputian pantries repose those viands that quench youthful hunger, a few canned soups and fruits, salted wafers, potted ham and chicken, sardines, and cheeses of every size and flavor.

As one enthusiastic host remarked, "We figure a cheese for every occasion. Brick is satisfactory for a rarebit, cream with a fruit salad, but for that snack after a bridge game, we enjoy Swiss, and for our Sunday night affairs Roquefort and Camembert appeal the most. Our guests always praise them."

The tantalizing fragrance of the imported cheeses are especially well-adapted to the informal needs rising in the small apartment. Here friends drop in at all hours, and genial apartmenters enjoy spreading good cheer quickly and satisfactorily which is always possible with salted wafers and tangy cheeses.

Although the mild taste of domestic dairy products is excellent, the foreign cheeses possess flavors obtainable only through patient curing operations, by special climates, and secret processes. A cheese whose delicious flavor is the result of unusual atmospheric conditions is Roquefort, which can not be duplicated elsewhere. This white, crumbly cheese with its "veins of flavor" is semihard, with a mixed spicy and "dry cheese" flavor good in dressings and salads.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

The Fighter.

This is the simple truth—who in despair
Gives up and says: "I will no longer dare,
All hope is vain, no farther can I go,
I will not stand and take another blow,"
Chooses himself his moment of defeat
And sounds his own sad signal to retreat.

Not beaten he whose courage still remains
To warm the blood that courses through his veins.
He who persists, though often beaten back,
And with each morning rises to attack,
Is still unconquered. Howsoe'er assailed,
So long as he fights on he hasn't failed.

The doubters and the timid quit the field,
Accept defeat and to its terrors yield,
But those whose hearts and minds and bodies ache
And still refuse the battle to forsake,
Still rise at dawn the struggle to begin,
Outlive disaster by their will to win.

Though some at times seem favored well by luck,
Man seldom travels farther than his pluck;
To drop the burden for no courage calls,
Once dropped it stays precisely where it falls,
But he's not beaten, whatsoe'er his plight,
Who carries on, still unafraid to fight.

Max Baer's Better Than Mae West; He Admits It!

Besides He Hasn't Trained Yet—His Voice, We Mean!

By Katherine Smith.

Backstage of a Washington theater . . . steel cables and coiled rope . . . tall curtains framing the stage . . . red and blue lights . . . two little the blondined chorus girls waiting to go on . . . beyond them, Max Baer, the idol of the Nation, crooning in the spotlight.

The voice of the crooner—"and two gardenias beside your plate—" the voice of the stage hand—"Gee, he sure sang that number swell last night—he's sure a prince of a fellow!"

He's a prince of a fellow to his stage associates, the answer to the maiden's prayer to the little girls in Podunkville, the big noise out of the fighting megaphone, the male Mae West to the moviegoers—but to one reporter he's a man-sized little boy, gloriously sitting on the top of the world.

The Male Mae West.

"Please, Mr. Baer, may I have a few minutes?" asked the reporter, feeling very small as this mass of humanity towered above her.

"I haven't had any breakfast yet, but, sure, I'll tell you all about it!

"No, I don't resent being called the male Mae West, because I'm going to go further than she will. She's kind of a fad with people, and I don't think she'll last, because she's not versatile enough.

"They're going to star us together in a picture—uh-huh, they advertised it'll be the greatest combination of brawn and brain since Anthony and Cleopatra. That's funny, I think . . . funny way to put it.

While he talked he shifted from one foot to the other, picked up a piece of string and twisted it around his huge fingers. He's a natural, he is. Wants to be on the go.

"Marion Davies is a grand girl—awfully sweet, and Norma Shearer, there's a girl for you! Myrna Loy is nice, too, very intelligent. I used to see a lot of her, while we were working together. She's quite a musician, and I love music; we used to talk about it a lot.

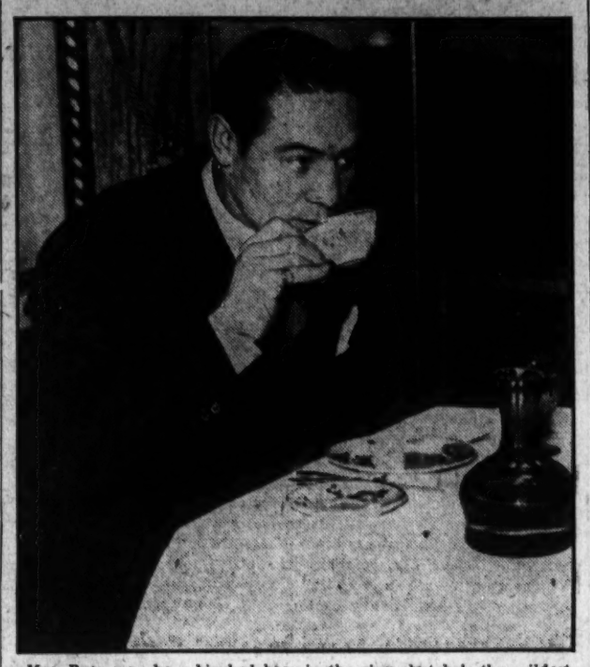
Will Train—His Voice!

"Fighting's my profession, and if I wasn't so near the top I think I'd go into music seriously. I'd like to be an opera singer. I'm going to have voice lessons with an opera singer pretty soon—right now I sing through my nose too much, and he's going to teach me how to throw my voice—this way," he rumbled a tune fragment in the bottom of his cavernous chest. The air vibrated.

"Lawrence Tibbett! What a voice he has! Even his speaking voice is rich and deep. He's a grand person—we had a good time together, have lots in common—music and movies.

"Naw! I never get stage fright. My first fight was before a little mess of people, and my last was before many thousands, but it makes no difference to me.

"It is the same way in the movies. I just go in and speak my lines, like to marry?—no—I'm not thinking to sing, and insists he'll go a lot further than Mae West. The latter has not commented. She may be afraid to.



Max Baer may be a big bad bear in the ring—but he's the mildest and gentlest sort of person when it comes to social life. He's learning to sing, and insists he'll go a lot further than Mae West. The latter has not commented. She may be afraid to.

just naturally. I remember once I had to go in and say 'Would you go to dinner with me, darling?' or something like that. I went on and said the words as if I really wanted someone I liked to go to dinner with me. I'd sort of rub the back of my neck," he illustrated, "or my chin—anything as long as it was natural."

"The movies are lots of fun, but there's too much fast living in Hollywood for me. Gee, I think people should get around and have a good time. I'm a happy-go-lucky fellow, sure, but I can't see this getting so drunk you can't walk straight, or have to be carried home. I don't like to see women drunk, either.

"What kind of a woman would I ing of it, now—well," he squinted thoughtfully at the ceiling and spoke slowly, "I wouldn't care if she were blonde or brunette, whether she had a nickel or a million; if I loved her, I'd do anything for her to make her happy. I like to make folks happy."

He Likes Murder.

The ideal husband, girls.

"I like games. Murder, do you like murder? You know—you turn out all the lights, yes, the darker the better!

"Sometimes we'd get together in Hollywood, a room full of people, and I'd decide to put on a show. 'Come on,' I'd say, 'I'll be director, and you be the heroine, and we'll pretend we're in Kalamazoo—' It was fun, a bunch of friends having a good time."

"Then I like to read these risque stories—no, you're wrong," hearing the reporter's uh-oh, "of Guy de Maupassant. I like Balzac, too."

"And, you know, I like children," he beamed benignly, "and they seem to like me."

Those Funny Fans.

"But I'm not the Nation's idol—people treat me well, but, gosh, I'm just an ordinary fellow. I do get funny fan mail, though, these little girls that write that they admire me so, and would like to meet me. But I get the biggest thrill from the foreign mail. It comes from Budapest, and Paris, and South America, and everywhere. I have to get interpreters to read it to me."

The reporter at this point got worried about his breakfast.

"Well, I won't keep you any longer, Mr. Baer—thank you so much for the interview."

He turned on one of those charmer smiles, shook her hand with both of his and said, "What's your name again?"

The reporter mentioned it.

"And the first name?"

She murmured the first name, too.

"Thanks. I'll remember that. And you can remember mine because I'm a bearcat. Do you mind if I call you by your first name?"

"Not at all—of course not!" (Gulp.)

"Then good-by, and hope to see you again some time."

"Good morning, Mr. Baer."

Scarfs Lend Graceful Form To Necklines

According to fashion's dictates, front decolletes this season are rather high and usually draped, whether the gown is for morning, afternoon or evening wear. On morning and sports dresses, hand-knitted scarves in angora or fancy rayon striped or checked cravats are usually knotted fairly high under the chin. On afternoon and elaborate models, the effect is obtained by means of a scarf in the same material, often lined in contrasting color and material, in rayon satin or in velvet or lame, which is draped quite high in front and allowed to float at the back, or with the two ends gracefully knotted. Chanel, who sponsors this idea, sometimes disposes the scarf in front in a pointed effect and dovetails it into the bodice.

On very smart dresses for dinner wear, cocktail parties, theater parties or even for full evening occasions, this effect is enhanced by a very low back decollete, sometimes down to the waist, which leaves all importance to the scarf effect. In some cases, the two ends of the scarf are disposed across the back decollete in brace effect and allowed to develop into a bow at the waist, thus giving the idea of a bustle, or continued into a train.

Culbertson on Bridge

An Interesting Cross-Ruff.

In the recent regional championship event of the United States Bridge Association held in the City of New York as a preliminary to the United States Bridge Association Grand National events now in progress in that city, a number of very interesting deals were played. Among the most interesting was the hand below, in which Mr. A. Mitchell Barnes, a member of the team-of-four captained by Mrs. Culbertson, was able to make a contract of four spades due to his careful planning after the opening lead. The hand was, of course, a freak, and freaks in bridge as in life, whether at the circus or elsewhere, are laws unto themselves. The player in bridge who fails to permit freak hands to develop as they should develop is storing up for himself lots of trouble. Fortunately Mr. Barnes, a close student of the game, has had plenty of experience with freaks.

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ — ♡ J 10 3 2 ◇ J 5 4 3 2 ♣ K Q 5 4
♠ K Q J ♡ — ◇ 10 9 6 ♣ J 9 8 7 6 3 2	N W E S	♠ A 9 7 6 3 2 ♡ A Q 9 7 6 ◇ A ♣ 10
	♠ 10 8 5 4 ♡ K 8 5 4 ◇ K Q 8 7 ♣ A

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♡	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding requires no particular comment. The contract of four spades is an entirely natural one to reach.

South, in making the choice of an Opening lead, possibly did not take into consideration fully enough the bidding of his opponents. However, the correct choice of an Opening lead with his holding is fairly difficult. His hand, of course, has the freakish 4-4-4-1 distribution, which suggests freakish distribution otherwise, but most players do not sense a freak with this type of holding, so South, safely enough, as he thought, opened the King of diamonds. The trick was won by Mr. Barnes with the Ace, and he thereupon laid down the Ace of hearts and discarded from Dummy a small club. The next play was the lead of a small heart, which was ruffed in Dummy. Mr. Barnes now returned to his own hand by leading a diamond, which he ruffed with a small spade, and returned another heart, which was ruffed with Dummy's second trump. The last diamond was then led from Dummy, and ruffed by the declarer, who now led the fourth round of hearts, upon which Dummy's last trump was played.

The Dummy was now void of all cards except clubs, and South was put in the lead with the Ace. Regardless of South's return and his holding of four trumps, Mr. Barnes now was assured of his contract. As a matter of fact, the return lead by South was a high diamond, which was ruffed by Mr. Barnes, and South was thrown in the lead again by the return of his last heart.

Thus played, through an appreciation of the probability of a freak distribution around the table, Mr. Barnes lost only the Ace of clubs, one heart and one trump. Players who sought to make the hand by drawing the trumps and establishing the club suit were inevitably defeated.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If East is Declarer at a contract of six spades and South opens the club King, what is the most probable method of fulfilling the contract?

East, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If January 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 4 to 5 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m.

If you were born on January 9, you are very discreet, and your friends know they can tell you anything of a confidential nature, without fear of your ever violating their trust. Due to your trustworthiness you will be given a position of responsibility, which will involve the handling of money or confidential business affairs. On this date you will have to exercise a good deal of self-restraint, for you will meet a person who has a very irritating effect upon you. This party tries very hard to be nice, but rubs you the wrong way. However, it will be to your advantage to retain the friendship of this individual.

Women born on January 9 are to be implicitly trusted. If you were born on this date, you will be successful in avoiding all sorts of entanglements by discreetly refusing to indulge in malicious gossip. There will be one great love affair in your life, and if this has not already occurred, it will, resulting eventually in much happiness. You will have some passing worries, mostly of a financial nature, which you will overcome. There is a tendency on your part to worry a great deal over what you fear may happen. If you will only realize most of your fears are only mental anticipation of what you think is going to occur, and which very seldom materializes, you will be much happier.

Men born on January 9 have qualifications that assure their success in the world of finance. While you are not of a reticent disposition, you are very loathe to discuss your personal affairs with any one. If you are a married man, you will make a mistake not to let your wife know exactly the condition of your finances. You will find that by confiding in your wife, you will get her cooperation in adjusting the home expenditures, so that they will conform with your bank roll, and you will thus avoid squabbles. You may expect the realization of your fondest expectations if you will not allow yourself to become discouraged by the promiscuous prophesying of demagogues and their ilk.

Successful people born on January 9:

Secretaries and Flat Top Desks Have Value As Decorative Pieces in Planning Interiors

Directed by Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 9.—Have you noticed how many more desks there are in homes today as compared to a few years ago? Instead of just one in the living room or study, often you'll find another in the hall and a third in a bedroom.

That's a good indication that more people are appreciating the decorative possibilities of desks as well as the convenience of their extra drawer and pigeonhole space.

The secretary type is by far the most fashionable. Good reasons for it, too. Space, for one thing. Cubby hole space for writing and filing materials. Shelf space for books or bibelots. Drawer space for many extras such as cards, score pads and so on.

Decoration for a second thing. It's an easy way to get height into a room that needs it. And it is a handsome piece of furniture, especially when it is one of the eighteenth century type.

This may be Chippendale with straight top with fretwork of carving running around in a most decorative way.

Or it may be Sheraton with three brass finials on a shaped top and glass doors with diamond fretwork. It's a Sheraton adaptation we've illustrated.

Both these are generally done in mahogany, the popular wood of the eighteenth century.

A favorite of an earlier period is the Gov. Winthrop with serpentine front and broken pediment on top. So is the blocked front early American secretary.

These, too, are usually of mahogany. But the Queen Anne, of still earlier vintage, is generally of walnut.

If a room is so planned that it doesn't need, or looks better without the height of a secretary, it can generally use a flat top desk. For this kind of desk can act the part of a table as well, holding a reading lamp and magazines. Nor does it have to be placed against a wall, as does a secretary.

The corner illustration shows the most simple type of Queen Anne flat top desk, with plenty of drawer space. It is made in either walnut or mahogany.

There are Chippendale flat tops, too, in mahogany; William and Mary types in oak or walnut; and Colonial mahogany ones. Enough types, you see, so that any room can have one that is harmonious with the other furnishings.

(Copyright 1934—Amos Parrish.)

Desks of the types described are available in Washington in all the better-class shops.

Radio Waves and Ripples

WITH the legal division of the Federal Radio Commission ready to recommend revocation of license for stations broadcasting hard liquor advertising, Columbia's thinkers should feel pretty smart.

They beat the Commission to the gun by a wide margin. Three months ago, they announced a policy of accepting advertising for beverages no stronger than light wines and beer. Most of the stations of the chain not controlled by them, including Washington's WJSV, followed suit.

The boys were practical. They expected Congress to legislate against them if the commission failed to act on its own. They were aware of the difficulties of keeping liquor broadcasting within the borders of wet States. So they turned thumbs down on rum ads before someone told them to, thereby getting themselves a lot of publicity that read very well to the W. C. T. U. and other drys.

In the commission's opinion, stations are licensed to operate "in the public interest," and since hard liquor advertising from wet States is being received in dry States where such advertising is forbidden by law might be considered objectionable, such advertising should be forbidden.

The question of interstate commerce also entered the Commission's reasoning. Legal authorities held that intrastate advertising is impossible from every practical viewpoint and thus such advertising must be considered interstate.

Any ironclad administration of this rule would be likely to lead to controversy with operators of local, low-powered stations in wet States. It is conceivable that some of these could broadcast liquor ads without violating Federal law or offending dry States.

First radio surprise of the new year is provided by N. B. C. in putting Claudine MacDonald in the announcer classification. She is the first of her sex on N. B. C. to bear the title.

The director of the Women's Radio Review, Mrs. MacDonald is on the air daily. Decision to give her the status of announcer came with adoption of a plan to put on the Tuesday afternoon programs, starting this week, as a musical interlude for the regular periods. Outside of the brief opening and closing announcements, Mrs. MacDonald will do all Tuesday introductions.

Gertrude S. Trowbridge, of Washington, has written a pamphlet on old age in the fly-leaf of which she has inscribed:

"After the golden years come those of fine silver."

The pamphlet gives Mrs. Trowbridge's version of growing old gracefully and happily. Root of all old age discontent, she contends, is the "as old as one feels" precept. Adaptation to physical alterations attendant on old age is a surer way to later-year happiness, she feels.

Last week Mrs. Trowbridge convinced WJSV Production Manager Al Chance that she is right; and around her old-age philosophies WJSV is building the Capital's first program series designed exclusively for persons over 60. First broadcast is tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

After a six-week run WJSV has closed down "Winnie, Willie and Hal," a bi-weekly show sponsored by a local motor car dealer, replaced it with a weekly broadcast of the rhythms of the Capital's Cotton Club Orchestra.

It is said the sponsors were surprised to learn that all that stuff about Henry VIII and Achilles was meant to be funny. They didn't like the idea of paying for something they couldn't understand.

WJSV has scheduled a few of the Woman's Hour guest performers for repeat appearances. Some of the more fortunate talent are Doris Dinelt and Fay Duncan, blues singers; Willie Huggins, crooner; Germaine, "little French girl," Helen Ault and the Melody Minstrel.

Comedy at Culpeper Will Be Staged Friday

Culpeper, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—"The Whole Town's Talking," a comedy, will be staged Friday evening by the dramatic club of the Culpeper High School faculty, directed by Miss Mary McNeill.

In the cast are: Miss Alma Garlick, of Washington; Miss Anna Minter, Dr. H. B. Lacy, B. R. Shotwell and C. E. Reams, jr., all of Culpeper, and Miss Julia Baggett, of Whitesville, N. C., also W. W. Jefferson, R. R. Tolbert, Miss Ruth Winn, Miss Frances G. Coleman, Miss Eliza G. Miller and Miss Ruth Campbell. An attractive chorus of 10 high school girls and music by the Culpeper Orchestra, directed by Edward S. Dinkel, will intersperse the acts.

Senate Ponders Appeal to Reich

Tydings Offers Resolution to Protest Treatment of German Jews.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday introduced a resolution urging President Roosevelt to protest to Germany against that country's treatment of Jews.

The resolution asked the President communicate to the Reich "an unequivocal statement of the profound feelings of pain and surprise experienced by the people of the United States upon learning of the discriminations and oppressions imposed by the Reich upon its Jewish citizens."

It expressed the "earnest hope" Germany soon would alter its policy and "restore its Jewish nationals their civil and political rights."

The resolution was referred to the Foreign Relations Committee.

Hope Dashed For Full U.S. Pay Return

5% Held Maximum at Present, Congress Leaders Say.

It's "Generous," Avers Buchanan, Citing Living Survey.

Five per cent is the maximum the President will restore to Federal salaries at the present time, according to apparently authentic information among congressional leaders.

A memorandum setting forth the results of the cost of living study in which the percentage restoration will be based is expected by members of the House Appropriations Committee today or tomorrow.

Although members of the committee said they had received no advance word, Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman, told newspapers reporters:

"You don't think I would have supported a 5 per cent restoration for next year if present living costs justified a greater restoration at this time, do you?"

Five Per Cent "Generous," He Says.

Representative Buchanan said his remark was not to be interpreted as a statement the President would recommend immediate restoration of 5 per cent. He added that study of the controlling living cost data indicated a 5 per cent restoration would be "generous."

The full Appropriations Committee is to meet tomorrow to consider the subcommittee report on the independent offices appropriation bill. By a divided vote the subcommittee, of which Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, is chairman, approved the 10 per cent maximum reduction recommended for next year in the President's budget message.

No hearings are to be held by the full committee on the pay cut, it was said, although hearings were sought by those seeking return to statutory salaries.

Fight to Go on Floor.

The fight is to be carried to the floor, and undoubtedly advocates of full restoration will amass a large number of votes, but they are not predicting victory. The President's budget message didn't help the full pay cause any.

Change in the present rule for changing salaries, however, may be voted. Under the law the President is restricted to changes every six months.

A proposal permitting changes whenever advancing living costs justified them would be acceptable to the Appropriations Committee, Chairman Buchanan said. He hinged committee approval on the wishes of the President.

Celler Offers 3 Bills.

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), of New York, yesterday introduced three measures designed to restore salaries to their statutory levels, repealing the economy law prohibition against filling vacancies, and prescribing that vacancies shall be filled from lists of substitutes whenever regular employes or substitutes shall have worked 44 hours in a week. The bills fixed a 30-hour work week of five days of 6 hours each.

Repeal of all of the economy law provisions reducing salaries is provided for in another measure being prepared by the American Federation of Labor. This bill is expected to be introduced in both House and Senate today or tomorrow.

The A. F. of L. bill also provides for restoration and maintenance of wage scales set by wage boards or similar wage-fixing authorities.

High School Work Survey Approved

Curriculum Study Early This Year Assured.

Regional associations of the United States colleges and high schools have voted support of a plan for the study of high school standards and accredited procedures, the education office of the Interior Department announced yesterday.

This action, it was said, practically assures the launching of such a Nation-wide study early this year.

The regional associations which have thus approved the survey represent 4,600 of America's largest high schools in 47 States, the District, Alaska and the Canal Zone.

Stay-at-Home Tourists Visit India Tonight

Post Resumes Travelogue Series, Presenting W. T. Biscoe.

Walter T. Biscoe, world traveler who spent many years in the Far East, tonight will describe the wonders of India, Burma and Ceylon in the eighth of a series of 20 illustrated lectures sponsored by The Washington Post at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue at Thirteenth street.

This unusual program started Tuesday, November 7, and lectures are held each consecutive Tuesday, beginning at 8:15 p. m., the last two weeks, a holiday intermission was taken. With the resumption of the program tonight, the travelogues will be given each week to and including Tuesday, April 3.

The purpose of The Post is to give its readers an acquaintance with the history, geography and customs of foreign lands, to provide a background for the news of world affairs carried in The Post every day. Through the Associated Press and other facilities, The Post is in constant communication with the entire civilized world.

In addition to the historical and geographical facts of the Far East, Mr. Biscoe will present an analysis of economic conditions in India. The animal life of India's temperate and tropic zones also will be touched upon. Stereopticon views will illustrate the lectures.

A charge of 25 cents is made for admission and tickets are obtainable at the Masonic Auditorium box office, beginning at 7 o'clock.

D.A.V. Relief Stand Is Given Roosevelt

Commander McQueen Talk With President.

Legislative proposals of the Disabled American Veterans were laid before President Roosevelt yesterday by J. W. McQueen, National commander, of Kansas City, who pointed out that his organization is now concerned only with relief of those whose disabilities are of service origin.

Declaring the Disabled American Veterans is not pressing cash payment of the bonus, Mr. McQueen termed its program the most conservative of any of the veterans' organizations. He added as he left the White House:

"As a result of conferences with Senators and Representatives during the past few days, as well as my talk with the President today, we are hopeful that either through legislation or executive order we will be able to obtain some modification of some of the harsh terms governing the men whose disabilities are of war origin."

A number were wounded in shooting when the train was brought to a halt by the brigands.

Just a Tip

Owner Warns Thieves They Got Jinx Auto.

Jack A. Milkie, 1021 G street southeast, wishes to warn the men who stole his automobile that it is a jinx car and the thieves would do well to get rid of it quickly.

The car has been in three collisions in two months and has sent two men to jail. It left Mr. Milke's care and cuistody Saturday.

First the car was badly damaged in a collision at Sixth and Louisiana avenue northewest; shortly later it was struck by another hit-and-run car on G strret and again badly damaged. On the third occasion it was struck by another hit-and-run driver who was in a stolen car. The thief leaped into a moving car that also had been stolen by the man driving it. Police arrested both, thereby recovering two stolen cars. Both drivers were sentenced to jail.

Again Milkie's car was repaired, but it was promptly stolen from in front of 1441 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, shortly after the 1934 tags, J-560, had been put on.

Furlough Bill Draws Frown

D.C. Commissioners Oppos Increased Leave for City Workers.

A bill designed to add 10 days to paid leave of police and firemen was disapproved yesterday by the District Commissioners. The employes now receive 20 days with pay a year.

On the basis of reports submitted by Maj. E. W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Fire Chief George S. Watson, the Commissioners stated that "in view of the economic conditions and the additional maintenance cost which would be incident to an increase in annual leave" they could not report favorably.

Enactment of the legislation would require the police department to employ 50 additional privates at an aggregate salary of $95,000 and the purchase of uniforms and equipment at an extra cost of $3,750.

The fire department, Chief Watson said, would be forced to add 40 privates at a cost of $75,000, plus $3,000 for uniforms and equipment.

Patron Wounded At Door of Cafe

Former Press Cameraman Drives to Hospital.

A bullet fired by an unidentified gunman early yesterday slightly wounded John Fitzgerald, 30, of 14 Fifth street northwest, a former newspaper photographer, as he was entering a restaurant at Ninth and E streets northwest through a revolving door.

The shot shattered a pane of glass and threw the scattered early morning patrons of the cafe into confusion. Fitzgerald refused police assistance and drove his own automobile to Emergency Hospital, where physicians treated him for a flesh wound. He then returned to his home.

Riding Display Will Be Given Friday at Fort

Annual Series to Have Added Features This Year.

By Marian May.

Dashing artillery and cavalry demonstrations are scheduled for Friday afternoon at the reopening of Fort Myer's annual series of exhibition rides. The program will be presented weekly through February 23.

The Sixteenth Field Artillery will present two interesting demonstrations. Battery B, commanded by Capt. Harold T. Brotherton, will demonstrate the maneuverability of a horse-drawn battery by executing intricate movements at fast gaits within the limited space of the drill hall.

A demonstration of the technique of firing with 75-mm. guns will be directed by Capt. G. B. Barth. A screen target used last year, with miniature tank moving across a painted horizon, will be employed in the demonstration.

Three interesting new cavalry drills will be introduced Friday. They are the musical drill by Troop E in which complicated movements will be executed in rhythm with special band music; a tandem jumping drill composed of 16 men and 32 horses, and a drill by noncommissioned officers.

The noncommissioned officers' drill requiring removal of saddles at the height of a jump, calls for the utmost skill and will be executed by crack riders from all the troops.

Fort Myer has held these exhibit rides for more than 40 years.

No other military post in the United States holds an established exhibition such as the Fort Myer display.

Prize Architecture Drawings Shown

Catholic U. Exhibits Best Bids for Paris Award.

Winning and outstanding drawings in the 1933 Paris Prize Competition for collegiate architecture students are on exhibit at the architecture department of Catholic University. The exhibition will continue tomorrow.

Sponsored by the Beaux Arts Institute of New York, the Paris prize is the most coveted by American architectural students. Practically all schools of architecture compete for the prize, which includes a year of study abroad with all expenses paid.

Approximately 600 students engaged in the 1933 contest.

Orchestra Planned At Friendship House

Friendship House, Southeast Washington's recreational center, is to have an orchestra. John Hreachmack, of the National Symphony Orchestra, will direct and instruct the musicians, who will be organized at a meeting Thursday at 7 o'clock.

Both boys and girls are eligible for the orchestra, according to Miss Lydia Burklin, head resident. Weekly practices will be held.

Curb Sought On Gasoline 'Bootleggers'

District Commissioners Propose Bonding of Dealers.

Delegation Says 500,000 Gallons Monthly Escape Tax.

District Commissioners moved yesterday to banish gasoline bootleggers from Washington by ordering preparation of a bill requiring gasoline importers to post a $20,000 bond against nonpayment of taxes.

Action came after a delegation of gasoline importers had called on the Commissioners to complain about purported wholesale evasions of the local gasoline tax.

Although District officials discounted the amount of gasoline bootlegged into the Capital, L. S. Scott, a member of the delegation expressed belief 500,000 to 1,000,000 are sold without tax payment every month.

Would License Importers.

As it was written yesterday by C. A. Russell, deputy tax assessor, the bill would also provide for licensing of gasoline importers with the tax assessor authorized to revoke licenses for nonpayment.

The delegation called specific attention to six gasoline importers who are delinquent in taxes to the amount of $50,000 and added:

"Aside from being a violation of the code of fair competition for the petroleum industry, the situation of permitting these accounts to withhold payment of gasoline taxes constitutes an unfair competitive situation."

The Commissioners explained that delinquent importers had been given a final warning and that the cases had been turned over to the corporation counsel's office for action.

Cooperation Proffered.

The delegation offered to cooperate in collection by reporting delinquents to Secretary Ickes, administrator of the petroleum code.

The Commissioners agreed to assist the delegation in asking Secretary Ickes to establish a separate petroleum code committee for the District in place of the existing arrangement which sets up one committee for Maryland and the District.

Officials of the tax assessor's office scoffed at the delegation's estimate, however, and stated that tax evasions of this sort are kept at a minimum as scouts of the larger companies check on bootlegging pursuits and report to the District.

Also in the delegation was E. D. Friedman, representing the service station division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Duke Defense Asks For Bar's Records

Data Will Be Presented in Disbarment Trial.

Production of records of the grievance committee of the District Bar Association relating to correspondence between that body and United States Attorney Leo A. Rover was demanded yesterday by Attorney Jesse C. Duke, who is on trial in District Supreme Court in a disbarment case.

Frank H. Myers, chairman of the committee, announced he would produce the records. The papers showed that Rover wrote a letter of complaint to the committee about Duke's charges that he and Justice F. D. Letts were guilty of sending up to the Court of Appeals a false and inaccurate bill of exceptions.

Norman J. Morrison, of the Department of Justice, went on the stand for Duke, but his testimony was excluded as immaterial.

Army Man Awaits Jury in Car Death

Air Corps Sergeant Cited in Killing of Boy.

Sergt. Emanuel Clavadetscher, United States Army Air Corps, was held for action of the grand jury yesterday, following a coroner's inquest into the death of Harvey Francis Daniels, 16, second member of his family to be killed by automobiles within a year.

The Army man was alleged to have been driving the machine which struck young Daniels Saturday as he played near his home, 639 L street southwest. The boy died a few hours after the accident.

Tomorrow Harvey will be buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Brief funeral services will be held at the home, followed by requiem mass at St. Dominic's Church.

Janitor Averts Blast Of Apartment Boiler

Residents of an apartment house at 1929 Fourteenth street northwest, were saved from probable injury early yesterday by timely action of a janitor.

Oliver Reddick, the janitor, told police he arrived at the building just in time to avert an explosion. Some one, Reddick reported, forced entrance to the furnace room and drained water from the heating plant. Pressure was reaching the danger point when he arrived, Reddick said. Damage was estimated at $100.

Safe After Kidnaping Scare

When two-and-a-half-year-old Sylvia Levinson, daughter of Samuel Levinson, grocer, of 1630 Thirtieth street northwest, went for a walk with her colored nursemaid yesterday the maid thought a man in a closed car was following them. Screaming, she grabbed Sylvia and ran through an alley back to the grocery store. Mrs. Anna Levinson, Sylvia's mother, and a grocery boy, cornered the man, who had left his car. Police later released him when they became convinced he was ill and not a kidnaper at all.

Chamber Body Plans Traffic Bureau Study

Judge McMahon's Charges Are Termed "Severe" at Meeting.

Terming a recent criticism of the Police Traffic Bureau system by Judge John P. McMahon "severe," the transportation committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, at a luncheon meeting yesterday, appointed a special committee to investigate the charges.

Judge McMahon had said he believed there were too few convictions coming from officers' testimony after arrests for traffic violations. He said the bureau should be abolished.

Members named to the special committee were Allen V. DeFord, chairman; Col. Edward Goring Bliss, W. C. McDermott, Harry C. Davis, Alexander Shapiro, and E. S. Wilson, jr. The meeting was attended by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Inspector H. H. Lamb, head of the Police Traffic Bureau; M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic, and William A. Roberts, assistant corporation counsel, District Public Utilities Commission.

Substitution of a medical board for the coroner's jury, now used, was discussed by the committee, but no action was taken.

The committee voted against making F street a one-way thoroughfare.

A resolution of sorrow was passed for the late C. Phillips Hill, former chairman of the five-point-pedestrian-program committee. Raymond B. Roberts was appointed to succeed him.

Com. A. J. Chantry Named for Captain

Naval Construction Aid Is Approved.

Commander Allan J. Chantry, jr., Construction Corps, U. S. N., of 1528 Twenty-second street northwest, was approved for promotion to the rank of captain by President Roosevelt yesterday.

Commander Chantry has been on duty in the Bureau of Construction and Repair since 1929. During the World War he served in the Hull Division, Navy Yard, Philadelphia. He was stationed at the Naval Academy from 1923 to 1927, following a year's duty at the Boston Navy Yard. From 1927 until transfer to duty here, he served as aid on the staff of the commander in chief of the Battle Fleet and as fleet instructor.

Commander Chantry was born in Malvern, Iowa, April 15, 1883, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from Iowa in 1902. He was appointed to the Construction Corps two years after graduation, and in 1910 completed the postgraduate course in naval architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Gas Firm Wins Right to Allow For New Dollar

"Iniquitous," Says Roberts as Value Estimate Goes Up $4,250,000.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday agreed to admit as evidence, for whatever value it may have, compilations of the Washington Gas Light Co. experts that value of its physical property has increased more than $4,250,000 in terms of the devaluated dollar of 1934.

Over the objections of William A. Roberts, special assistant counsel of the commission, Acting Chairman Riley E. Elgen admitted the new figures on original cost, raising the total from $19,385,590 to $23,645,158 over a period of 83 years. A mathematical formula was used to restate production cost figures since 1848 in terms of 1932 dollars.

The new valuation figure was introduced by Stuart F. Kosters, of Stone & Webster, which made the valuation study for the gas company, and was supported by Stoddard M. Stevens, jr., counsel for the utility.

Roberts termed the mathematical manipulation "an iniquitous method" and contended that the $23,645,158 does not represent a true original cost of the property.

The physical property valuation figure, together with the value claimed for land of $3,289,000 and the $1,984,000 for working capital, plus an unnamed amount for "going concern value," will constitute the gas company's final valuation estimate.

Fairfax Man Badly Hurt When Saw Belt Breaks

Snapping of a belt on a power saw yesterday caused the critical injury of W. C. Woodruff, Chantilly, Va. The Fairfax County merchant was rushed to Georgetown Hospital, where physicians held doubt for his recovery. Woodruff was reported to have a fractured skull.

Lineman Badly Hurt In 35-Foot Fall Off Pole

Hurled 35 feet to the ground when a telegraph pole on which he was working at Wade and Stevens roads southeast yesterday snapped near its base, Sherman Miller, 30, lineman, of Brentwood, Md., was injured, probably fatally.

Police took Miller to Casualty Hospital. His skull was fractured and he suffered possible internal injuries, physicians said.

Auto Crashes On Memorial Road Mount

Circle Near Alexandria Responsible for Most Serious Wrecks.

Redesigning of Danger Spots Along "Model" Highway Loom.

Mount Vernon Memorial highway, which was meticulously designed to be as nearly accident-proof as road engineers could make it, is gaining an unsavory reputation because of its increasing number of traffic mishaps.

A study of the boulevard, with emphasis on Memorial Circle which is blamed for most of the accidents between Arlington Bridge and Alexandria, probably will be asked of the Bureau of Public Roads with the object of reducing driving dangers, it was learned yesterday.

Scores of autos have been damaged or wrecked at the circle, just this side of Alexandria, since the highway was opened February 22, 1932. Last week-end there were at least four such accidents, all occurring at night when fog made vision almost nil. No one was seriously injured.

The speed limit on the hikhway is 45 miles per hour. Park police detailed to patrol the road rarely make arrests, however, below the 55-an-hour mark. Nevertheless, 15 of the 19 arersts made in December on the highway were for speeding.

A large percentage of accidents occurring at the circle, where traffic must turn sharply, involve motorists taking advantage of the high-speed limit on the straightaway approaches and underestimating the abruptness of the turn. To take the circle at more than 30 miles an hour is to invite disaster, park officials say.

Fireman One Victim.

One car which climbed the curb and stopped inside the circle last week was driven by a Washington fireman who had not had an accident in 20 years of operating a car, including fire trucks. The fog was so thick at the time he did not see the reflector warning until the car was upon it.

Another car which came to grief at the circle a few nights ago was driven by a New Yorker, en route home from Florida, who, after surveying the damage to his machine, announced balefully: "I'm going to see my Senator about this."

One complainant ascribed the trouble there to the height of the warning reflectors, which are in the cente of the circle on either side. They are at headlight level and, on a foggy night, deceive motorists into believing they are following the tail light of a car ahead. Before they realize their mistake, their machines often are wrecked. One auto which came to grief there last week was damaged $109.

Unlighted For Economy.

The Mount Vernon boulevard has not been lighted since last July, due to economies. It costs approximately $25,000 a year to keep the rustic illumination standards in operation and the appropriation was discontinued at the end of the its fiscal year. During the first few months after they were turned off, park police noted a decline in the number of night accidents. The figures started to rise, however, at the onset of inclement weather.

Intended originally to serve the practical purpose of slowing down traffic entering Alexandria, the circle later was proposed as a memorial to M. B. Harlow, who is credited with having conceived of a highway uniting the Capital and George Washington's homestead. Virginia civic organizations plan to erect a fountain in the center.

Mrs. Knott Quits Board Of Christian Science

The resignation of Mrs. Annie Knott from the Christain Science Board of Directors of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ Scientist, in Boston, was announced here yesterday. Mrs. Nevia E. Ritchie has been named to succeed her.

Mrs. Knott has served on the board 15 years, and has had 30 years continuous service with the Mother Church as associate editor of periodicals and in other posts. Mrs. Ritchie, formerly of Kansas City, and now of Sewickley, has served as a lecturer since 1925 and been connected with the publishing society.

Stocks Dwindle In Turnover; Market Sags

Trading Lightest in Months; Sales Volume Cut to 734,230 Shares.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Speculative wheels barely managed to turn in the stock market today. Volume was around the lowest levels for the past several months and price changes were correspondingly narrow. A net loss of 1-10 point was shown by the averages.

The Treasury's gold price remained unchanged at $34.06 an ounce, thus setting a new record for durability at a single level. There has been only one increase, amounting to 5 cents, in the past five weeks.

Whether there is any connection between this stability and the prospective new financing on the theory that a fairly steady dollar would help sales of new bonds has not been disclosed.

Little Effort in Stocks.

Stocks made little or no effort to go anywhere in particular. Chrysler was still an active post and the stock gain felt pressure, yielding more than a point. American Telephone, helped by a favorable November earnings statement, did rather well for a time, but lost most of its advantage.

Allied Chemical closed a point higher. For other leaders net changes were chiefly fractional, small gains and losses being well divided among such issues as U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, General Electric, Du Pont, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Case, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, National Biscuit and Harvester. Douglas Aircraft was active and firm.

Union Pacific rose nearly 2.

Transfers totaling 734,230 shares were the smallest since December 4, which, in turn, had been the lightest since last spring.

Financial Review Outlook.

Financial reviews appearing over the week-end mentioned the stimulation which they thought business should receive from the heavy expenditures by the Federal Government. That the funds can be easily obtained through the usual banking channels is regarded as certain in Wall street, which readily enough recalls the stagnation that has existed in the capital market for many months. The volume of new corporate financing floated in a "normal" year considerably exceeds the amount to be sought by Uncle Sam.

Steel operations, currently at 30.7 per cent of capacity, according to the Iron and Steel Institute's figure, are almost exactly double the rate a year ago when the National average was 15.5 per cent. A week ago it was 29.3 per cent and the quick recovery from the year-end let down—which was smaller than usual—caused favorable notice.

It is assumed that consumers are hurrying to take delivery on first quarter orders; meanwhile, automobiles demand has yet to reach its peak, nor have the mills begun to fill rail and trackage material business in any great quantity. The magazine Steel said some steel producers were looking for a top rate of around 60 per cent during the next three months, a ratio that would mean profits for many plants.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Growing Importance of "Hidden Budget" Makes It Desirable to Have a Contingent Liability Item in Treasury Statements on the Debt.

By Ralph West Robey.

Reports that President Roosevelt is considering the possibility of a full Government guarantee for certain emergency corporation bonds brings to the fore one aspect of Federal finances that usually is overlooked. This is the existence of what may be termed a "hidden budget." Everyone knows that we have both an ordinary and an extraordinary budget. Few people, however, seem to realize that in addition there is this third budget—the hidden budget, consisting of outstanding obligations that in effect are the same as direct Government obligations, although they do not appear in the public debt.

In the legislation as it stands there are four means for creating such a budget. More accurately there are four organizations that may issue obligations containing a Government guarantee. Most important of these is the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. All of its obligations are guaranteed by the Government both as to principal and interest. The same is true in the case of the obligations issued by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The obligations issued under the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act—a maximum of $2,000,000,000—are guaranteed at present only as to interest. An equal amount may be issued under the Home Owner's Loan Act. These also are guaranteed by the Government only as to interest. It is this $4,000,000,000 that the President now is considering having the Government guarantee as to principal as well as interest.

Amount Outstanding With Public Is Still Small.

Up to the present there has been only a relatively small amount of any of these obligations issued to the public. In the case of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation all its obligations are held—or were until a few days ago anyway—by the United States Treasury with the exception of the debentures that have been issued in connection with the gold-buying program. There are, I believe, $100,000,000 of such gold-buying debentures outstanding.

Should the banks from which the R. F. C. has purchased preferred stock take debentures in payment, however, the amount of such obligations outstanding could become many hundreds of millions of dollars. Under the law, in fact, there is no limit imposed upon the amount of funds which the R. F. C. may use for this purpose. Here, then, is an absolutely open-end in the hidden budget.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, from the point of view of getting obligations out, is quite unimportant. It is limited to $50,000,000—an amount that seems scarcely worth mentioning in these days of a $7,000,000,000 deficit.

So far, it is siad, the Home Owners Loan Corporation has issued only about $125,000 of its obligations. These bonds are issued in exchange for first liens on urban homes. Recently they have been selling for about 85 cents on the dollar. On Saturday, with the announcement of the President's considering a full guarantee, they jumped 6 points.

The other $2,000,000,000, or those provided for under the emergency farm mortgage act, are issued by the Federal Land Banks in exchange for farm mortgages. It is understood only about $100,000,000 of these have been issued.

Reports of Corporations Not Sufficient Protection.

In each of these cases it is necessary, of course, for the corporation in question to make a report. At any time, therefore, it presumably is possible to determine the situation as of the date of the last report. Such reports, however, always are slow in coming out. As a day-to-day problem, therefore, it is impossible to find out to what extent the Federal Government is obligated in ways that are not shown on its daily Treasury statement. It is this, as well as the fact that the obligations are never included in the public debt, that justifies the term hidden budget.

In the interest of public protection, therefore, it seems to me that the least the Treasury should do is to show the extent of these obligations in its monthly statements on the public debt. If possible the amount should be shown on the daily Treasury statements. So long as it does not do this it is failing to present the true picture just as truly as is a corporation that fails to show its contingent liabilities in its financial statement.

Late Support in U. S. Loans Brings Gains; Sales $15,723,000.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Late support brought moderate recoveries in listed U. S. Government securities today, but the majority of loans in this group again finished lower in the face of forthcoming budgetary financing problems.

The only other highlight in a rather listless market was a sharp advance of German State, municipal and corporation issues. Gains in this section ranged from 1 to around 7 points.

Continued repatriation of Reich dollar maturities was said in some quarters to have been largely responsible for the further upturn.

U. S. Treasuries Gain.

Federal bonds were quite heavy during most of the session. Sales in this department aggregated some $8,600,000, against $5,300,000 last Friday. Declines ranged from 1-32nd to 17-32nds of a point. Treasury 3½s managed to emerge with a net gain of 2-32nds.

Unconfirmed reports attributed part of the late recoveries to buying by the Treasury. During the week ended January 4, the Treasury announced, it purchased government issues for the sinking fund and other accounts amounting to $44,713,000.

Highest grade corporation loans maintained a fairly steady tone, with fluctuations generally confined to minor fractions.

Canadian Pacific Up.

Canadian Pacific liens were up 1 to 2 points and gains of around a point or so were shown by some bonds of Central Pacific, St. Paul, Childs Co., Columbia Gas, Hudson & Manhattan, Portland General Electric and Southern Pacific.

Issues of North American, Atlantic Coast Line, Burlington and New Haven were somewhat heavy.

Aside from the buoyancy of German loans, gains of a point or more were recorded by obligations of Belgium, Australia, Brisbane City, Cuba, Denmark and France. British bonds eased and those of the French municipalities were soft.

Sales totaled $15,723,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged.

Burley Sales Open Again in Kentucky

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Sales of burley tobacco halted in December after a week's sales were reopened in Kentucky again today but promptly closed at Carrollton and at some warehouses in Hopkinsville and Owensboro because of dissatisfaction with prices offered.

First sales at Lexington indicated a price trend of around $12 per 100 pounds, practically the same as in December, and the minimum figure set in the burley marketing agreement signed last week.

At Richmond prices of around $12.50 to $13 were indicated and growers who expressed themselves seemed satisfied. Those at Carrollton shouted down the auctions before a definite price trend could be learned.

A. T. & T. Net Is Increased In November

Atlas Tack Profit Rises in Nine Months to $61,200.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP). — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today reported a sharp expansion in net operating income for November in comparison with the same month of 1932. The total was $1,288,643 against $218,646.

Gross also improved, aggregating $7,290,850 compared with $6,602,274.

For the first 11 months of 1933 gross was $79,268,473 against $81,387,159 in the same 1932 period. Net operating income amounted to $14,808,529 against $7,050,678.

The figures cover operating activities only and exclude such income, as dividends and interest.

Atlas Tack Corporation reports for the nine months ended September 30 net profit of $61,200 against net loss of $41,303 for the same period last year. The balance sheet for September 30 shows current assets of $587,139, which included $136,806 cash. Current liabilities were $62,203.

Fluctuations in the stock of the company which preceded the sharp break last month are now under inquiry by the Securities Bureau of the State Attorney General's office.

The board of directors of Quarterly Income Shares, Inc., today declared a distribution of 3 cents per share for the fourth quarter to shareholders of record January 15, 1934, payable February 1, 1934.

The Northern Securities Co. today declared a dividend of $3, payable January 30 to stock of record January 15. The previous payment was $2 on November 1, 1933.

France Increases U. S. Imports.

Paris, Jan. 8 (AP).—France agreed today to increase threefold the quotas on American products as announced for the first year.

Stock of Canned Oysters Decreased

Unsold stocks of canned oysters on October 1 in the hands of packers who produced more than 90 per cent of the 1932-33 pack amounted to 14,045 standard cases of 48 5-ounce cans, according to information collected by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries.

The stocks on hand on October 1, 1932, amounted to 34,279 standard cases, and on October 1, 1931, 28,722 cases. On May 1, 1933, there were 57,732 cases on hand; on May 1, 1932, 91,572 cases, and on May 1, 1931, 77,937 cases.

The domestic production of canned oysters during the 1932-33 season amounted to 241,770 cases compared with 397,516 cases during the season of 1931-32.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The average dividend rate on 600 common stocks, reports Moody's, increased in December from $1.10 to $1.11 per share, as compared with a rise from $1.06 to $1.10 in November. Although December increases were "fairly numerous," says the service, "they were confined to smaller or medium sized companies and therefore did not have much effect on the total amount of dividend payments."

December sales volume of the first 15 chain store organizations to report represented the highest monthly total for 1933 and was 14.2 per cent above December, 1932. The combined total was $193,007,023, an advance of $15,427,268 over the same month of the preceding year.

for this week on the following stocks, among others: American Machine & Foundry, Cluett Peabody, Continental Can, Nash Motors, National Steel, Owens-Illinois Glass, Procter & Gamble, Southern California Edison and F. W. Woolworth.

The European Electric Corporation, Ltd., is calling for tenders of its 6½ per cent debenture bonds, due 1965, to a total of $2,500,000. Holders will receive 2,900 Swiss francs per $1,000 principal amount of bonds, equivalent to about $890 on the basis of recent exchange rates. Payment will be made optionally in dollars at the rate of exchange at 10:30 a. m. on the day the bonds are accepted. The total amount of the issue outstanding is $5,775,000.

Stocks—Speculation almost ceased and the sales volume dropped to 734,230 shares, the lowest since December 4. Prices closed with an average sag of 1-10 of a point.

Bonds—Late support brought moderate recoveries to Federal loans. General prices were unchanged from the 74.8 level. Sales totaled $15,723,000.

Curb—Rank and file of curb stocks changed little in a dull session. Utilities finished steady. Losses predominated in metals and alcohols. Sales decreased to 141,000 shares.

Wheat—Grain prices averaged higher, with corn leading the advance. Wheat climbed ⅛ to ⅜. May wheat sold at 84⅛; July, at 82⅜.

Cotton — Prices mounted on increased trade and commission house demand, stimulated by relatively steady Liverpool cables. March sold at 10.72. The general market advanced 11 to 14 points. January sold at 10.65.

Rubber — Crude rubber futures closed quiet, 11 to 16 points lower. January sold at 8.75; March, at 8.95.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged and stood at 3.20; refined was also unchanged and sold at 4.30.

Coffee — Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4 sold at 9¾; Rio No. 7, at 8¾.

Silver—Bar silver was steady. It stood in New York ⅛ lower at 43⅞.

Gold — Bar gold in the United States was unchanged at $34.06 per ounce. It stood in London at 126 shillings and 8 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar rose on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.09 to the English pound; 6.09½ cents to the French franc, and 37.00 to the German mark.

Goods Market.

New York, Jan. 8 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were firm today with the advances made in print cloths at the week-end fully sustained. Wide goods for industrial purposes showed improvement and rayon fabrics were in good demand. Sales of worsted dress goods for prompt shipment broadened and spring lines of men's wear increased. Most of the buying was in goods selling at $2 a yard or lower. Burlaps were firm. Buyers were looking about for new silk printed lines.

Curb's Price Change Littl In Dull Sessio

Utilities Finish Steady; Sales Volume Cut to 141,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—The ran and file of active stocks on the cur exchange closed with slight varia tions today. Trading was the dull est in a long period.

Utilities finished steady but an equal division of small gains and losses predominated in metals and alcohols. A few inactive specialties ranged wider with results also mixed.

Singer Manufacturing, Midvale Co., and Pan-American Airways lost a couple points or so in meager trading. In similar activity, advances of a point or more were marked up by Safety Car Heating, Lerner Stores, Duke Power and Commonwealth Edison.

Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, American Gas and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams ended about steady. Bunker Hill & Sullivan got up a point and Lake Shore Mines gained a substantial fraction. Hiram Walker lost a point while Newmont yielded nearly as much.

Transfers approximated 141,000 shares compared with 167,000 for last Friday.

Cotton Prices Advance on Trade Buying

January Closes at 10.65 as General Market Gains 11 to 14 Points.

New York, Jan. 8 (AP).—Cotton was higher today on increased trade and commission house demand stimulated by relatively steady Liverpool cables, continued reports of a firm spot situation and encouraging advices from the cotton goods trade. After selling up to 10.74 for March, prices reacted partially under realizing, but firmed up again with March closing at 10.72. The general market ended very steady at net advances of 11 to 14 points.

The opening was 6 to 14 points higher in response to an active demand from both foreign and domestic trade sources. There was also considerable commission house buying, and while the advance encountered a good deal of realizing it was readily absorbed, with active months selling 13 to 16 points net higher before the end of the morning.

This carried May up to 10.90 and July to 11.05 or the highest prices touched here since last September. The market lost 7 or 8 points of its gain with a tendency to take profits increased by the rather disappointing showing of the stock market, but the trade continued to buy and closing quotations were within 2 to 4 points of the best for the day.

Domestic trade interests were credited with buying for mill account while the demand through houses with foreign connections seemed to be coming from European and Far Eastern sources.

Exports today 27,901, making 4,396,627 so far this season. Port receipts, 11,485. U. S. port stocks, 4,007,533.

Commodities Continue Rise During Week

New York, Jan. 8.—The Daily Weighted Price Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., displayed sustained strength during the past week and on Thursday, January 4, stood at 101.49. This was slightly above the figure for the same day of the previous week and with the exception of the index for January 2 was the highest recorded since November 17. The index for the corresponding day of last year stood at 70.50, or approximately 31 points below the current level.

The majority of price changes over the past week were on the up side. Among the items to advance were listed wheat, corn, rye, lard, coffee, sugar, hogs, steers, lambs, hides, cotton, silk and steel scrap. The declining commodities included oats, flour, butter, rubber, lead and silver.

Following is tabulated the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Weighted Price Index of 30 basic commodities compiled from quotations furnished by the United Press since November 1, 1933, and November 2, 1932. (1930-1932=100):

Full Cargo Wheat Sale To Europe Sets Record

Portland, Jan. 8 (AP).—The sale of the first full cargo of wheat to Europe in at least 15 months was confirmed by the trade here today. The sale consisted of around 280,000 bushels. The grain will be shipped to the continent for orders.

Bank's Deposits Rise.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 8 (AP).—St Paul's national banks began 1934 with $8,000,000 more in deposits and $13,000,000 more in resources than they had at the start of 1933, responses to a national bank call disclosed today. The deposits had increased from $116,362,608 to $125,217,001. Total resources were $145,686,558.

Steel Operation Seen Rising to 60 Per Cent

Rail, Auto and Building Requirements Expected to Boost Activity.

Cleveland, Jan. 8.—Steel production appears to be heading toward a pronounced February-March bulge as requirements from the railroads, automotive and building industries are deferred, steel executives envisioning a 60 per cent rate as a possibility before the quarter ends, states the magazine Steel.

Still handicapped by production difficulties for new models, due primarily to adoption of front-spring suspensions, steel orders from automobile builders expected early in January are postponed at least several weeks. Chevrolet and Ford probably will break the log jam shortly, and other manufacturers will be in the market with sufficient tonnage to make February an exceptionally strong month for steel shipments.

In February and March mills will begin to roll rails resulting from the Government's financing, and car repair and building programs by that time should be translated into larger steel demands. Public construction work held in abeyance during the winter is expected to expand under seasonal influences and the clearly defined purpose of the Washington administration to push ahead with Federal-aid projects.

Demand Sustains Output.

Meanwhile, miscellaneous requirements from a diversified list of consumers, plus some moderate automotive, railroad and structural business, have been sufficiently broad to prevent steelworks operations last week going below 31 per cent, exactly twice the rate in the comparable week last January. All indications appear to assure a rebound of several points this week.

Operations actually increased in the Wheeling, New England, Cleveland and Detroit districts, the latter rising 27 points to 79 per cent as the Great Lakes division of the National Steel Corp. reached 100 per cent, partly for stock production. New England rose 23 points to 95 per cent; Wheeling 15, to 56; and Cleveland 6, to 51. Chicago was off 6 points to 34; Youngstown 6, to 32; Pittsburgh 5, to 22, and Eastern Pennsylvania 2 to 22½; while Birmingham held at 52. Tin plate production, after several months close to capacity, is down 30 more points to 45 per cent.

January was anticipated as a month of assimilation of stocks in consumers' hands, but miscellaneous steel orders during the first week proved unexpectedly heavy, overcoming much of the lag in the major classifications. With inventories now out of the way, the general manufacturing trade is beginning to negotiate first-quarter contracts. The new year starts, therefore, with steelmakers highly encouraged by the outlook.

Week's Structural Awards.

Structural shape awards for the week, 14,800 tons, held fairly close to last year's average. Noted on the Pacific Coast is the fact shape awards there last year were the highest in history, even exceeding the former peak in 1929 by 69,000 tons. Active for early award in that district are 95,000 tons. The Navy has placed 6,468 tons of plates and 3,000 tons of shapes for various yards.

PWA approval of a $77,000,000 loan to the Pennsylvania Railroad is expected to release shortly a heavy tonnage of structural material for completion of its electrification program, construction of 7,000 freight cars and orders for 100 locomotives. Of shapes originally awarded for electrification, 40,000 tons remain to be specified.

New York Central is formulating an inquiry for 40,000 tons of rails, its officially estimated rail requirements for 1934. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific is to purchase 75 coaches; Norfolk & Western, 18, while Chesapeake & Ohio is inquiring for 26, and Nickel Plate, 8. Actual freight car orders last month, 316, brought the total for the year to 2,460, compared with 1,739 in 1932; and 10,694 in 1931.

Raw Materials Strong.

Raw materials are strong, with scrap prices continuing to advance. Farm implement manufacturers are taking more pig iron, but shipments in general this month are expected to be about half the December tonnage, as a reaction from the heavy movement last month.

Daily average pig iron production in December was 38,456 gross tons, 6.4 per cent higher than November. The total for the month, 1,192,136 tons, brought the output for the year to 13,221,707 tons, 52.3 per cent over 1932. At the year's close 74 stacks were active, three less than November 30.

Steel's iron and steel composite is unchanged at $32.42; the finished steel composite remains $51.10; while the scrap index is up 13 cents to $10.83.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Jan. 8.—WHEAT—Receipts, 80 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 3,398 bushels. Stock in elevators, 1,284,979 bushels.

Opening prices were: No. 2 red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 88½; January delivery, domestic, 88½; February delivery, domestic, 90.

Receipts of wheat running light and demand is fairly good here for No. 2 red winter, garlicky. Off grades hard to dispose of.

CORN—Shipments from elevators, 2,045 bushels. Stock in elevators, 16,874 bushels.

Receipts of corn from the nearby territory are running light and trading is moderate. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair domestic demand.

COB CORN—Quoted at 3.00@3.25 per bushel for colored; some demand for yellow on spot. Offerings not burdensome.

No. 2 yellow corn (old) arriving here by car quoted at 65@66 per bushel with trading billing.

OATS—Shipments from elevators, 272 bushels. Stock in elevators, 47,342 bushels.

Receipts of oats show considerable variation in weight, being mostly light. Demand fair in a jobbing way. Good, heavyweight oats are relatively scarce and such command a good premium. No. 2 white oats, 42@43 per bushel, as to weight and position.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1¼ per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Stocks in elevators, 78,660 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. Supplies of good timothy. Prices range from $12 to $14 per ton, as to grade and quality. Poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below No. 2 timothy.

Sam Rice, Released After 19 Years With Nats, Eager to Continue

Veteran, 41, Is Looking For Job

Says He's Not Through and Believes He Will Find a Spot.

Has .322 Life Batting Average; Is Praised by Griffith.

SAM RICE yesterday bounced from the National pastime of baseball to the national pastime of looking for a job. The 41-year-old outfielder of the Washington Ball Club became a rookie in the army of the unemployed when he was handed his unconditional release by President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, after 19 seasons in the harness here.

Forty-two next month, Rice nevertheless does not plan to hang up his spikes, but is eager to play ball some more. He is in the market for offerts, he announced yesterday.

"I may be old, as ball players go," said Rice, "but I'm not old as Sam Rice goes. I can still play baseball for a lot of teams and I think I'll be in this league next season. I don't have a job, yet, but there's no hurry. Something out to turn up before the clubs go South."

Letter From Griffith.

But Sam Rice's career with Washington is at an end, terminated yesterday morning at Griffith Stadium when President Griffith handed the veteran outfielder his release in the form of a near-heart-rending letter of leave-taking as follows:

"In pursuance of my conversation with you in reference ot your baseball future, at which time you expressed a desire to be given permission to deal for yourself in the event the Washington club decired not to further retain your services, I wish to say to you that the Washington club is pleased to acquisce in your request and hereby grants you permission to deal with any club that you see fit.

"Sam, it is with deep regret that the time has arrived when your service with the Washington team is ended, but I hope our personal friendship will carry on for all time.

Deep Appreciation.

"'Old War Horse,' I have no words that can express my deep appreciation of your wonderful playing, loyalty to service and the 100 per cent effort you put into your work for those long 18 years you were with the Washington club. You were ever ready and willing to give you best, nd on, what that best was! Sam, I consider you one of the best ball players of all time, and Washington fans and myself are going to miss you, but you can be assured that wherever you go and whatever you do, the hearts of Washington fans and myself will be with you and pulling for your success."

Thus Rice and Washington fandom were informed of the departure from Griffith Stadium of its oldest human landmark. Possessor of a lifetime batting average of .322 in his 19 years with the Nats, recognized as one of the fleetest base runners of his time, Rice passes from the Washington picture with memories of his deeds for the Nats still vivid here.

Started As Pitcher.

Starting out in his baseball life as a pitcher with a United States Navy team, Rice joined the Petersburg Club, of the Virginia League, in 1915 and the same season was brought to Washington for a purchase price of $800.

His pitching eclipsed by his hitting soon after he joined the Nats, Rice was converted into an outfielder and justified the judgment of Manager Griffith by hitting .299 in his first full season. He was never dislodged from an outfield post on the team, falling below .300 only twice in 19 seasons, and never below .294.

With the erturn of Goose Goslin to the Washington fold last season, Rice was relegate dto the bench, going to bat only 73 times in 1933.

Mac Smith's 280 Wins Coast Golf

Wins Tourney Fourth Time in 9 Years of Play.

Los Angeles Country Club, Los Angeles, Jan. 8 (AP).—For the fourth time in the nine years of the tournament's existence, MacDonald Emith, silent, steady Scot, won the Los Angeles Open Golf Championship today with a 72-hole total of 280.

The Carnoustie crusader finished wit ha brilliant 68 on the last round. His other scores were 73, 70 and 69. This gave him 25 per cent of the prize money, which was expected to amount to between $5,000 and $6,000.

Jack Dempsey Arrives For Visit to Capital

Jack Dempsey, the great, arrived in Washington last night from New York, halted a while at Union Station to greet a few greeters, pose for photographers and answer a few queries from the press, and immediately hied himself away to his apartment in a local hotel.

Dempsey later in the evening made an appearance with Max Baer at the Fox Theater, where his heavyweight contender turned actor is holding forth this week.

C. U. Is Seeking Fifth Victory Tonight

Faces Western Maryland; American U. Opposes Hampden-Sydney.

SEEKING its fifth victory of the season, Catholic U. will meet Western Maryland tonight at 8:15 o'clock at Brookland in one of the two games ushering in the week's basket ball program. At American U. the Eagles entertain Hampden-Sydney starting at 8 o'clock.

Gallaudet afforded the Cardinals an opportunity of limbering up for the Green Terrors, who are making their second visit to Washington this season, and they should be ready for the test. Western Maryland was not very impressive when it helped Georgetown inaugurate its campaign at Tech High School, but this was because of a lack of practice rather than ability.

With the visitors will be two local boys, Frank Cumberland, a graduate of Central High School, and Jim Draper, who matriculated at Western. Sadusky, Mergo and Lipsky are the team's outstanding performers.

Freshmen Clash.

Catholic and Maryland's freshmen teams will play a preliminary game starting at 7:15 o'clock.

Hampden-Sydney took a fall out of American U. only last week, winning by a score of 20-10, and is an overwhelming favorite to repeat. The Eagles waged a bitter and brilliant fight, but their opponents had an edge in experience and it told in the final outcome. Porter and Wheatley, forwards; Hill, center; Sampson and Crampton, guards, probably will start for the home team.

Georgetown learned yesterday that Ed Hargaden will be on the bench a week because of his injured eye, and further that it may be without the services of Bill Connors, center, for its important league games this week. Connors has a charley horse and the leg is as stiff as a board. If the event he can not play, Jerry O'Connor will be moved into the tap-off position, and Joe Corliss will pair with Jack Crowley at guards. "Sis" Esenstadt will sub for Hargaden. Tommy Carolan is the other forward.

Hard Foe Thursday.

The leading scorer in New York City collegiate basket ball is a chap named Kramer, who has made 129 points. Second is Schwartz, with 128. Third comes Bender, with 107, and fourth is Kameros, with 105. All play with Long Island U., and Long Island happens to meet George Washington Thursday—the night after its skirmish with St. John's, of Brooklyn, at New York. But the Colonials are making strenuous preparations for both games, as though they expect to come home with a couple of prized victories.

Maryland scrimmaged against the freshmen yesterday, and will follow up with hard workouts today and tomorrow in preparation for Thursday's all-important game with Duke at College Park. The Blue Devils bowed to Catholic U. earlier in the season and Maryland naturally figures that its supporters look to it for the same result.

Pro Makes Correction.

As inadvertently reported in yesterday's Post, Fred McLeod, Columbia pro, was quoted as saying "golf is a game of endurance and not skill" in commenting on the decision of the U. S. G. A. to have a full week of match play in future National amateur tournaments.

The correct comment was that "golf is a game of skill and not endurance."

Kimrey Tests Gallagher Tonight

Declared to Be in Good Condition While Foe Is Far From Peak.

Mayes and Wright Vie in Semifinal Fight at Portner's.

MARTY GALLAGHER, the perrennial heavyweight "comebacker," whose last two returns to the ring were crowned with such sweet success, will be working under two distinct handicaps in his latest rejuvenation attempt at Portner's tonight. One is the excess poundage that he will drag in the ring with him and the other the right-hand shock punch that dangles from Dewey Kimrey, his opponent for the 10-round encounter.

That Gallagher's last two good showings, against Les Kennedy and Bob Tow, are directly attributable to good conditioning is the belief among the ringwise. It is as generally conceded that Gallagher is not properly conditioned for the Kimrey bout, and therein lies the element that has changed the aspect of tonight's bout from a massacre for Gallagher into one in which he may be on the receiving end.

Gallagher Not at Peak.

It is the consensus of opinion among local ring addicts that Gallagher's frantic, but last-minute efforts to whip himself into shape, will prove altogether futile. His lumbering attempts in the gymnasium, his lack of timing and poor judgment of distance, have convinced close followers of the ring racket that he is too far out of shape to reach the peak by ringtime tonight.

Kimrey has been very impressive in local workouts. In his one local appearance here he bowed to Arthur Huttick's superior body punches, but left an indelible impression by connecting with Huttick's chin in the later rounds, and winning every round handily from then on. His handlers claim that he had no time to train for the Huttick bout, but that he is in the pink for the Gallagher encounter.

Mayes-Wright Promising.

A six-round semifinal between Johnny Mayes and Carey Wright offers a rare tidbit for lovers of fancy boxing mixed with unadulterated heavy hitting. Wright is perhaps one of the most rugged welterweights produced locally in some time, and he is equipped with a natural fighting ability. Mayes is the better boxer and boasts a better shock punch, but he is nowhere near as rugged as Wright.

In a quarter of four rounders, Billy Vermillion engages Sailor McKenna, Mike Groves meets Lou Voda, Marty Ryan tangles with Billy Bullock and Joe Green fights Tom Horn.

Around-the-ring selections—Kimrey over Gallagher, Wright to beat Mayes, Groves to whip Voda, Bullock over Ryan, Green to defeat Horn, McKenna over Vermillion.

Seven-Game Schedule For Navy Lacrossers

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—A schedule of seven games for the Naval Academy lacrosse team during the coming season was announced today by Lieut. Comdr. Harvey E. Overesch, graduate manager of athletics.

The bookings include two games in the Maryland area—University of Maryland and Mount Washington Club. In addition to the Army game at West Point, the Middies will make one other trip, to meet Princeton.

The schedule: April 7, University of Pennsylvania; 14, Princeton (at Princeton); 21, Penn State College; 28, Mount Washington; May 5, Syracuse; 12, Maryland; 26, Army (at West Point).

Potomac State Wins.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Potomac State College floor team won its opening game of the season over Alderson-Broaddus College of Philippi, 43 to 26. Offutt led the attack with 10 points, while Dick Fromhart scored 9. Honaker, Varner and English tallied 19 of the visitors' 26 points. State chalked up 19 markers in the final session. In the preliminary Parsons High defeated Potomac Reserves, 31 to 19.

"I Pick Carnera"—Tunney

Champion's Reach Is Too Great for Loughran, He Says; Thinks Baer Should Reach Top if He Forsakes Night-Clubbing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8 (AP). Primo Carnera, world's heavyweight boxing champion should win over Tommy Loughran when they meet in Florida, Gene Tunney, former title holder, said today.

Tunney, here on a mining deal, made his forecast on the ground that Loughran hasn't enough reach to cope with the Man Mountain from Italy.

Referring to Max Baer, Tunney said the former Livermore butcherboy should reach the top of the pugilistic heap if he keeps his mind on fighting instead of nightclubbing until 4 a. m.

"Max Baer is a great actor and a great fighter," said Tunney. "But being a great actor may influence him to become a bad fighter. If he fights Max Schmelling again I won't be in any hurry to pick Baer to beat the German because of the psychological and physiological elements entering the contest. Baer will be handicapped by the fact that he doesn't have to fight, but can turn to acting for a good livelihood."

Stonehouse Is Winner at Miami

Beats Dowby 4 Strokes in Playoff for Open Golf Prize.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP).—Shooting a careful, steady game, Ralph Stonehouse, of Indianapolis, today won the Miami Open golf championship.

The diminutive pro., who already holds the eastern Indiana and the tri-State titles, defeated Willie Dow, 48-year-old Miami Scot, by a four-stroke margin in an 18-hole play-off after tying at 279 to lead the field at the end of the regular 72-hole tournament yesterday.

With slow, pains-taking form, Stonehouse carded a 36, one over par, on the outgoing nine, and shot the return side in a regulation 35 for a 71. He picked up two birdies on the round, one for a deuce, but slipped one over regulation figures on each of three other holes.

Quick Stroking Costly.

Dow, who seldom studied a shot and decidedly was erratic around the greens, was out in 38, one over par, and was only one stroke better on the incoming nine to post a 75. Quick stroking cost him a number of putts, some for only a foot or two.

The title alone was at stake today, the players having decided to split the first prize of $500 and the second place money of $350 for a purse of $425 each.

Victory for the Indianapolis player probably will carry with it an invitation for him to participate in the international four-ball classic to be played here in March.

In previous years, it has been customary for the winner of the Miami Open to receive a bid to the colorful four-ball matches, which will be played by 16 two-man teams.

Stonehouse Always Up.

In the match today, Stonehouse established a lead on the first hole and held it throughout. Four times during the early part of the round, Dow cut the margin to one stroke, but never was able to do better.

Fence Put Around Ring For Wrestlers, Fans

Kansas City, Jan. 8 (AP).—To protect spectators and wrestlers, a fence has been built around the ring at Convention Hall here.

In several recent bouts, wrestlers have been hurled from the ring into laps of observers, resulting in fisticuffs.

Middletown Holds To Its Soccer Lead

Defeats Frederick, 8 to 1, in League Contest.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 8 (Spl.)—Middletown held on to first place in the last half race of the County Soccer League by defeating Frederick at McCurdys Field, 8 to 1.

Brunswick easily defeated Thurmont, 5 to 0; Walkersville set back Emmitsburg, 7 to 2, and Jefferson failed to appear at Mount Airy and the game was forefited to the latter, 1 to 0. All of the games were played on heavy fields, which prevented effective pass work. Middletown's victory eliminated Frederick from the second half pennant race, the valley team leading by a slender margin. Brunswick and Mount Airy are on even terms for second place, one point behind Middletown, the leader.

Bowler Rolls Perfect Score After 35 Years

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.). There's nothing like persistence if you keep it up long enough.

For 35 years C. E. Pike, manager of the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys at Elkins, diligently tried to achieve a perfect ten pin record.

At last he has succeeded. He rolled 12 straight strikes the other night on the association alleys, registering the perfect score of 300.

Pike's 674 for three games, combined with A. T. Hodges and "Chick" Fowles, totaled 1,875 for a new three-man record for the Elkins alleys.

U. S. Amateurs Back Change In Play

Only Yates, of Atlanta, Is Opposed to Plan for Match Play.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP).—With but one dissenting voice, and that merely a personal preference for the old system, prominent amateurs of the Nation, headed by George T. Dunlap, jr., 1933 title holder, and Francis Ouimet, Walker Cup captain, heartily indorsed today the new all match play method of determining the amateur golf champion.

Despite the physical stress and strain added by elimination of 36 holes of qualifying play in the tournament proper and substitution of 18-hole matches from the start among 180 sectional qualifiers, the veterans—Ouimet, Chick Evans, Jess Sweetser and Jesse Guilford—are all in favor.

Opposed by Yates.

Only Charley Yates, of Atlanta, one of golf's most promising youngsters, thought he liked the old way of doing things better, but he hastened to add that one system of play seemed as fair to him as another.

"Some players in the large districts qualifying against strong competition with say 150 or so previously had to prove their mettle all over again in tournament qualifying play, while now they go right in to the match play," he said.

Ouimet is strong in his approval.

True Amateur Spirit.

"The new plan is revolutionary, but I believe it clears up many difficulties," he said. "It represents the true amateur spirit and will prove immensely popular. The new system will be the seventh under which I have played in the National amateur."

"I think it's a good change," said Dunlap. "Amateur golf has always been essentially match play, and will continue to be, although perhaps medal play requires more skill."

Carnera Manager Pleads Tax Guilt

New York, Jan. 8 (U.P.).—Billy Duffy, American manager of world's heavyweight champion Primo Carnera, today pleaded guilty to income tax evasion and agreed to pay the tax out of his share of the Carnera-Tommy Loughran title bout at Miami.

A felony indictment charging Duffy with evasion was dismissed at the recommendation of the Government.

Disposition of the case was made in the court of Federal Judge John C. Knox. The action arose from the charge that Duffy flailed to file a return on his net income of $34,000 in the year 1930. The Government claimed Duffy owed $2,007.

Duffy's income in 1930 was derived from the barnstorming tour made by Carnera before he became world champion.

School Fives To Start Title Race Today

Central Not Expected to Have Trouble With Western.

Eastern - Tech Figure to Stage Battle in Feature Game.

THE open season for the interhigh basket ball title starts today. The teams—Central vs. Western and Eastern vs. Tech. The time—3:30 o'clock.

More interesting data is as follows: The defending champion, Central; the favorite, Eastern; the probable winner; Eastern, Central, Tech or Roosevelt.

Central and Western open up the day's festivities with the Mount Pleasant five, a heavy favorite to win the fray. Central, which was doped as the team to beat before the current season got under way, has dropped into the second notch by reason of a couple of defeats sustained at the hands of the George Washington Frosh and Trenton (N. J.) High School.

Cellar Seen for Western.

Western is once more being groomed for the cellar berth, simply because it hasn't shown the stuff, because it hasn't anything but Jimmy Corcoran.

Eastern, reputed to be the best five of the league, has a much harder assignment, battling Tech, practically depleted through graduation, but carrying a wallop in its tune-up games to insure it "dark horse" dimensions—which is something. However, should Tech win over the highly touted Eastern team this afternoon, label it an upset.

Roosevelt has drawn a bye, but it will be gathered on the Tech hardwoods, Friday against Central, when the series will be resumed.

Easy Come Wins Tropical Park Feature to Give Mrs. J. H. Whitney a Double

Filly Equals Track Mark In Sprint

Covers 6 Furlongs in 1:10 4-5; Feudal Lord Beaten by Nose.

Black Harmony Gives Mrs. Whitney First Purse in Second.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 8 (AP).—Thanks largely to a strong ride by the sensational apprentice Earl Porter, Mrs. John Hay Whitney completed a double here today when her 3-year-old, Easy Come, captured top honors in the Matecumbe Handicap of 6 furlongs. The Prince Pal filly had to equal Don Romiro's track record of 1:10 4-5 to beat Feudal Lord, J. E. Smallman's recent winner, by a nose in the last nod. Mrs. J. Grossman's Merrily On, a recent arrival from New Orleans, was a length and a half behind in third place.

Easy Come paid her backers $7.80 for a $2 ticket. Feudal Lord ruled favorite in the field of seven.

Wisely Eases Back.

Earl Porter, all of 98½ pounds, rode a heady race and outfinished Master Litzenberger in the final drive. Porter broke his mount on top but wisely eased back when Feudal Lord showed tremendous speed. Merrily On, another speed merchant, was in the thick of the fight himself. Feudal Lord drew into a two-length advantage, but Porter began to ride hard upon hitting the final straightaway and Easy Come wore down the pacemaker in the final jump. Merrily On tired in the closing stages.

The popularity of Porter with the racing public was evidenced when the boy won the sixth event after being all but left at the post with Well Built. The B. B. Stable filly beat out Carbon by a neck and the customers cheered Porter until he had retired from view. Well Built was allowed to settle into her stride and when called upon, she ran over the field, although Carbon offered stubborn resistance to the end. A neck separated the pair. O'Neill was third. Porter earned a double on the winner, which paid $6.60.

Skippy McGee Wins.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Back Fence had to be satisfied with second position in the first race behind the likely youngster Skippy McGee, the $4.30 choice. Abner, again breaking from the outside, ran another good race to be third.

Mrs. Whitney was more successful in the second race, Bobby Jones sitting pretty all the way on the speedy Black Harmony. The latter, paying $7.10, scored by 2 lengths, easing up. Shuffle On beat Sainted by 4 lengths for the place. Sainted and Gooseflesh, the C. V. Whitney pair, drew the bulk of the play but neither could get close to the flying leader.

Zorana Runs Well.

Zorana, backed down to 2 to 1, ran one of her best races to earn the third purse in a jog. The filly was slow to begin, but she picked up the leaders fast on the outside and won as if much the best. In High set most of the pace and held on gamely to finish second, three lengths back. Fred Almy was a fast-closing third. Billies Orphan stopped after forcing the pace for 3 furlongs.

A dozen 3-year-olds cavorted over the mile distance of the fourth and out of a blanket finish emerged God o' War, a $64.80-for-$2 shot, to register by a nose over Rego, another long shot. Barkantine was right there in the third hole. God o' War took the track on the way to the first turn and showing rare gameness, maintained his advantage over Rego throughout. Barkantine finished resolutely to beat out Patrice Runyon and Solid American.

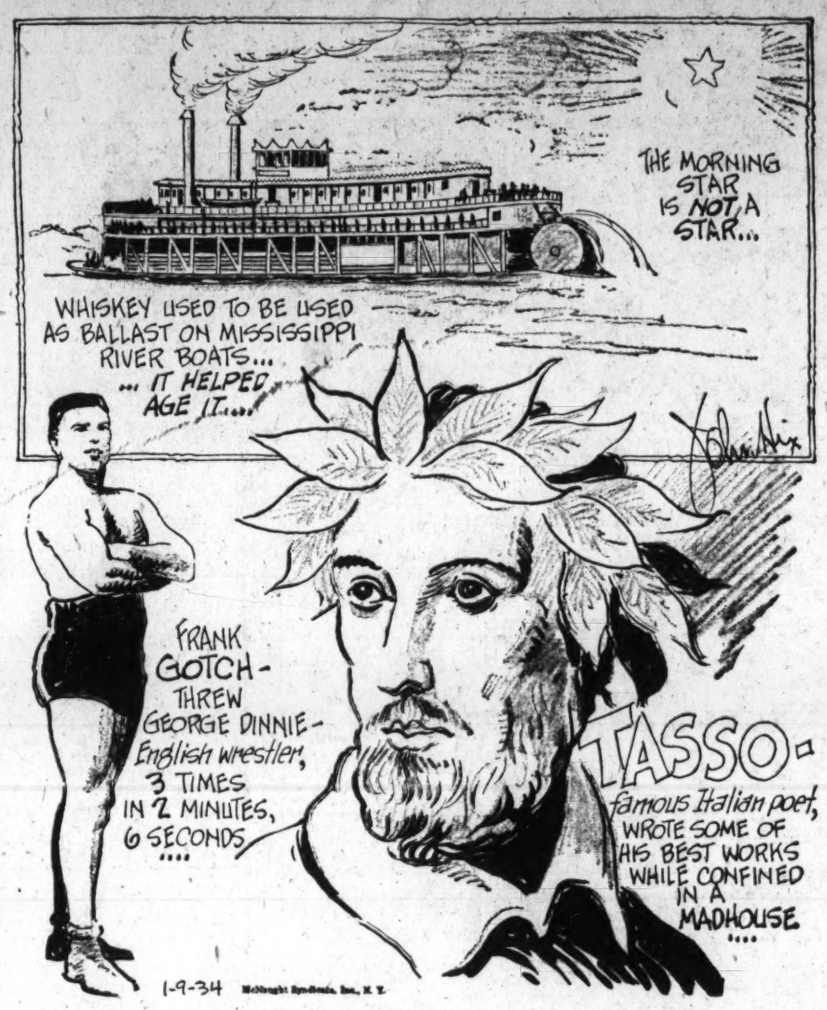
Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



Torquato Tasso, Italian poet of the sixteenth century, enjoyed ever increasing success and popularity until he was 31 years old. At that time he wrote his famed "Jerusalem Delivered," and sent it to Rome for criticism. This piece, which was a religious epic based on the First Crusade, was so bitterly criticized by scholars and churchmen that Tasso was driven to the point of madness.

Added to this were taunts and jealous courtiers, and the poet's unrequited love for a princess. Eventually his mind seemed to break completely, and he was sent to an insane asylum, where he was confined for seven years. During this time he composed some of his best poems. He was released by Alfonso, duke of Ferrara, in 1586.

Again Tasso reached popularity and fortune, and the Pope invited him to Rome to honor him—an honor which came too late, however, as Tasso died before he could make the journey. Tasso is remembered chiefly for his "Rinaldo," "Aminta," "Jerusalem Delivered," and "Torrismondo."

The morning star is no star at all, it is any of five planets which may be in a position to rise shortly before the sun. On occasion it is Jupiter, Mars, Saturn, Mercury or Venus.

Gotch met George Dinnie, English contender, at the latter's insistence—agreeing to throw Dinnie twice in half an hour. Instead, he threw him three times in 2 minutes and 6 seconds; 6 seconds for the first fall, 55 for the second, and 5 for the third.

Virginia Boxers Hosts To Harvard Saturday

University, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Harvard's boxers who come here to open the Virginia ring season in Memorial Gymnasium next Saturday night are an experienced combination of veterans well coached in the fine points of defense against the Cavalier style of gloved attack.

Five regulars from last fall, three men new this season, will make up the Crimson team. These men are coached by Henry Lamar, former Virginia boxer and one-time national amateur light-heavyweight champion, who has first-hand knowledge of Cavalier ring tactics.

At the Post . . .

Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 8.

Dear Al:

From all that I can gather, this is the first meeting to be run in this country for years without doped horses. The narcotic men are thick around this course. Horsemen at first resented this state of affairs. However, as the days have passed and it has become evident that all horses are being closely watched, they have gone back to training their charges to win without the aid of stimulants. Perhaps the thing that made everyone feel at home was the fact that a saliva test was taken of one of J. E. Widener's horses. This proof that a horse is just a horse, no matter who owns him, seems to have calmed all concerned. The doping of horses, which began with broken-down racers, has spread rapidly in late years until even stake horses have been forced into the "hot" class. This has already affected the breeding, experts say. Down with the dope and up with the mutuels! That's us.

BILL.

First race—Twidgets ran a pretty fair sort of race the other day and in this field of maidens may find enough speed to take the winning end of the purse. Kiltamond breaks from the inside and should be second. Wild Rosebud could be the sleeper of the group.

Second race — Hernando has drawn heavy play on two occasions hereabouts. Seems to have the edge on this group, despite the presence of top weight of 114 pounds. Black Mock and The Glen to take care of the others. The last named is dangerous and should be a fair price.

Third race—Even Play has a good chance in a field of this sort. I understand he will be assigned a hustling apprentice. Gets the Bennings call. Bickering ran a fine second last out and will be ready if the top makes mistakes. Lauretta Nash and Foreeful are long-shot possibilities.

Fourth Race—Just Fun has been sprinted with a longer race in mind. This one is in wise hands and can run when the right money is down and the odds are up. Gets in light. Gibby's Choice and Bollee to complete the money circle.

Fifth Race—Frederick and Jockey Porter appear to fit best in the top picture in the feature sprint. This horse has two good efforts to his credit here. Ridgeview, a winner last out, appears to be the chief contender. North Mill's 103 pounds deserves consideration when searching for a long price.

Sixth Race—Representative scored an impressive victory in his previous contest. Seems well placed among these. Don Guzman, with one of his good efforts, could be uncomfortably close at the finish. Waterway for the show end.

Seventh Race — Everfair gets in with a mere 100 pounds. Is a factor each time the stable says the word. Has quite a task ahead in this race but I believe it can be done with the right kind of a ride. Zembla is another with a century up. War Bonnet to take care of the remainder.

Keyser High Scores.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Keyser High showed marked improvement as it scored an easy victory over Bruce High of Westernport, Md., here, 44 to 25. Bill Thompson and "Lefty" Rice, forwards, scored 30 points between them. The victory was Keyser's first in three starts.

Virginia Quint To Oppose W. & M.

Game at Charlottesville Tonight Last at Home Until January 26.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Jan. 8 (Spl.).—Virginia's next basketball game is with the College of William and Mary, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, in the Memorial Gymnasium. This will be the last home appearance of the Cavalier cagers until they play Maryland on January 26.

Washington and Lee is the first Southern Conference rival on the Virginia court yard. The Generals are to be played Thursday night on the floor of Lynchburg's new armory. Games away from home against V. M. I., North Carolina, Duke and N. C. State follow.

Coach Gus Tebell is highly pleased with the way his charges battled against Randolph-Macon College last Saturday, when they held the visiting Yellowjackets to 6 points while scoring 43 for themselves in a fast-played game.

John Murphy, a 6-foot 3-inch lad from Richmond, was tried in center and the performance he turned in delighted Coach Tebell as well as some 2,000 spectators who packed the gymnasium for the contest. Bobby Nelson, playing guard, also won a good word from the Cavalier coach for his fast floor work.

William and Mary is known to be bringing a strong team for the game tomorrow night. And on Thursday, in Lynchburg, Washington and Lee will be out to make up for the defeat it received at Virginia's hands in the Hill City game last year.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKIPPY McGEE, $4.30, $2.70, $2.20; BACK FENCE, $4.50, $3.00; ABNER, $4.70.

SKIPPY McGEE, a fine looking gelding, broke a bit slow and, hard hustled to get into a position going into the turn, swerved out a bit just after entering stretch, closed with a rush and won going away. When he settles down he may develop into a high-class 2-year-old. BACK FENCE broke well in motion, went right to the front, displayed keen speed, but weakened a bit in the last twenty yards. ABNER got away fast from the extreme outside post position, ran up with the pace, went wide entering stretch, but came with a good rush. He is improving and will win soon. JIM CRAWFORD ran a good race, showing more than in his previous start. PROSECUTOR, on the inside, saved ground and is worth noting. JOHNNY O. showed a flash of early speed. SYNOD just galloped along back of the field.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:38½. Winner Mrs. John Hay Whitney's blk. g. (3), by Nocturnal—Oh Susanna. Trained by J. W. Healy. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:05 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK HARMONY, $7.10, $5.00, $2.20; SHUFFLE ON, $8.70, $2.30; SAINTED, $2.20.

BLACK HARMONY was very rank at the gate, but broke well in motion and went right to the front, opened up a wide lead in the first furlong, saved ground all the way and at the end was only galloping. SHUFFLE ON was kept well up, came to the outside entering stretch and finished with good courage. SAINTED, away slowly and hard ridden around turn, came to the inside in final furlong and finished gamely. ARTIST KNIGHT displayed good speed and held on well. LYNNEWOOD ran a smashing good race for his 2nd effort. He broke fast, followed pace for half a mile, then tired. He was plainly short. GOOSEFLESH trailed far back of the leader and never made up any ground. SCYTHE was outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:12½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's ch. f. (4), by Waygood—Rose Dawn. Trained by E. Alexandra. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZORANA, $6.00, $4.50, $5.40; IN HIGH, $7.80, $5.90; FRED ALMY, $16.30.

ZORANA, going in best form, worked her way up on the outside, assumed lead just after leaving the out of the back stretch, opened a wide gap and won nicely in hand. IN HIGH, away fast, rushed into lead, made BILLIE'S ORPHAN quit, but she tired in final sixteenth. FRED ALMY moved up fast in run down back stretch, but was bothered some around turn and finished gamely. BILLIE'S ORPHAN followed the early pace for three furlongs, then quit. MAKING BUBBLES, on the outside, was forced out on turn, but finished with a rush. WORLDLY WISE showed a flash of early speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40½. Off at 3:45. Winner, Robert C. Winmill's ch. c. (3), by War Whoop—Lichtning. Trained by G. H. Strate. Value to winner, $360; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 1:41.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOD O' WAR, $64.80, $56.20, $20.20; REGO, $47.20, $16.50; BARKANTINE, $4.60.

GOD O' WAR, breaking rapidly from the outside, rushed into lead going into first turn, set an even pace, saved ground and just lasted to win. REGO followed the early pace closely, closed with a rush right at the end. BARKANTINE, well up all the way, had no mishaps. PATRICE RUNYON was forced wide going into the first turn and kept on the outside for entire trip. She lost several lengths by staying out. SOLID AMERICAN, well up, made a game effort. CABOCHON was never a factor. TRY FAIR had plenty of early foot.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. The Matecumbe Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:18. Off at 4:20. Winner, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's b. g. (3), by Prince Pal—No Regrets. Trained by J. W. Healy. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:10 4-5 (equals track record).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASY COME, $7.80, $3.50, $2.50; FEUDAL LORD, $2.60, $2.50; MERRILY ON, $3.70.

EASY COME, favored by light weight, was eased back off the fast early pace, closed with a rush in stretch and was up to win in final stride. FEUDAL LORD was sent to the front with a rush, saved ground all the way and held on gamely under weak handling. MERRILY ON moved up very fast turning out of back stretch, but weakened badly in last 100 yards. MINTON, on the inside all the way, ran a fair race. CHARACTER was in close quarters in early part on inside, but was never able to get up. REPAID was outrun from the start. MAGYAR was outclassed.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:45½. Off at 4:46½. Winner, B. B. Stable's ch. c. (4), by American Flag—Scribble. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $420; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:39 2-5.

WAR SAINT	115	3	6	2½	4½	6½	8	8	Obert	123.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WELL BUILT, $6.60, $2.60, $2.40; CARBON, $2.80, $2.30; O'NEILL, $2.90.

WELL BUILT ran a remarkable race. She was practically left at the post and was lengths back of the leader going into first turn, but Porter allowed the filly to rate along to the turn out of the back stretch, where he began to send her along on the outside. WELL BUILT closed with determination, caught CARBON at the sixteenth pole and outgamed him. CARBON got away well, was rated along in second place to the middle of the turn, where he took lead, but could not stall off the winner's rush. O'NEILL was messed about all during the running, but finished fast on his own courage. SCREAM was kept with the early pace and ran fine race. LAVAAL had speed for six furlongs. SKY HAVEN broke well, but dropped out of all contention. He ran a very poor race. WAR SAINT and PEACE JUNIOR both had early speed.

NEVERSUCH REDUCTIONS AGAIN
The world's largest piano manufacturers, with factory facilities for employing 2,500 expert workmen, are determined upon operating their plant on a 100% production basis and returning to work hundreds of skilled piano mechanics.
To stimulate this onward march of progress, and for a limited time only, the outright sharing of factory profits with retail and every purchaser of a genuine Kimball-made piano is speeding up employment and accomplishing the desired and noteworthy results.
The immediate response to this generous and most unusual offer by strict economists, and particularly musicians who have for years been familiar with the superior qualities of the Kimball, gives this celebrated maker the fullest assurance of a record-breaking wholesale piano distribution.
Here you may select your bargain piano, not from one, but from among many new and beautiful marvelously voiced Kimballs, the quality piano of the ages, right at the manufacturer's own store. Every instrument in this special factory offer, both grands and uprights, are brand-new and without a blemish of any kind—instruments which have never been loaned, rented or used in other homes or places of questionable custodianship. The kind of pianos that instill a pride of ownership.

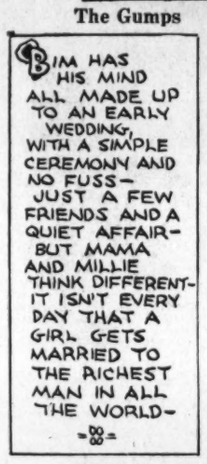
The Gumps

Ouch!



JIM HAS HIS MIND ALL MADE UP TO AN EARLY WEDDING, WITH A SIMPLE CEREMONY AND NO FUSS— JUST A FEW FRIENDS AND A QUIET AFFAIR— BUT MAMA AND MILLIE THINK DIFFERENT— IT ISN'T EVERY DAY THAT A GIRL GETS MARRIED TO THE RICHEST MAN IN ALL THE WORLD—
MILLIE AND I HAVE BEEN TALKING THINGS OVER— AND WE'VE DECIDED THAT IT REALLY WOULD BE BEST TO POSTPONE THE WEDDING DATE A LITTLE, SO AS TO GIVE US MORE TIME TO PREPARE FOR IT— WHAT DO YOU THINK?
AH— NOW, MOTHER— YOU KNOW HOW I FEEL ABOUT THAT

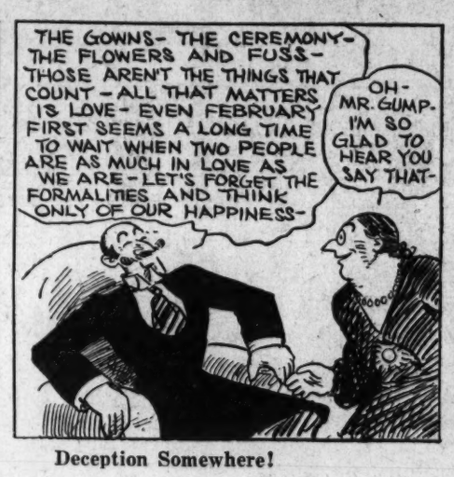
Dixie Dugan



THE GOWNS— THE CEREMONY— THE FLOWERS AND FUSS— THOSE AREN'T THE THINGS THAT COUNT— ALL THAT MATTERS IS LOVE— EVEN FEBRUARY SEEMS A LONG TIME TO WAIT WHEN TWO PEOPLE ARE AS MUCH IN LOVE AS WE ARE— LET'S FORGET THE FORMALITIES AND THINK ONLY OF OUR HAPPINESS—
OH— MR. GUMP— I'M SO GLAD TO HEAR YOU SAY THAT—

Deception Somewhere!

BECAUSE I KNEW IT WOULD MAKE MILLIE HAPPY TO HAVE THE WEDDING POSTPONED— SO I'VE HAD SIX HUNDRED INVITATIONS PRINTED FOR FEBRUARY 13TH—

MONEY?— HOW COULD THAT MAN TRAPPMIRE HAVE GAINED ANYTHING BY MAKING PEOPLE BELIEVE THAT I— A TINY BABY— WAS DEAD?
SHALL I TELL HER, ELLEN?
YES, C BEVVY—

YOU SEE, CHILD, ALTHOUGH YOUR GRANDFATHER WAS A PROFESSOR AND A SCIENTIST— STRANGELY ENOUGH HE HAD MANAGED TO ACCUMULATE SOME MONEY— QUITE A BIT OF IT—
OH—

Dick Tracy

—HE HAD PLANNED TO DIVIDE HIS MONEY BETWEEN ELLEN AND MYRA, YOUR MOTHER— WITH A SMALL SUM TO HIS ASSISTANT, TRAPPMIRE— BUT WHEN YOUR MOTHER ELOPED HE WAS SO FURIOUS THAT— INFLUENCED NO DOUBT BY TRAPPMIRE— HE DISINHERITED HER, LEAVING HER SHARE TO HIM TO CARRY ON HIS WORK—
THEN— WHEN THE NEWS OF YOUR BIRTH —HIS FIRST GRANDCHILD— WAS RECEIVED— THE OLD GENTLEMAN REPENTED— AND HE ANNOUNCED HE WAS GOING TO CHANGE HIS WILL AGAIN RESTORING MYRA'S SHARE TO YOU— HER BABY.— NOW CAN YOU SEE WHY TRAPPMIRE WANTED IT BELIEVED THAT YOU WERE LOST AT SEA?

Young Year.

The new year seems a winner so far as it has gone; the plumber and the tinner both hailed its joyous dawn; it meant the final turning away from sighs and groans, from vain and futile yearning—they felt it in their bones. The tanner and the fletcher now look for better things, and they remark, "You betcher, the change has come, by jings. The last year was a flivver, a lemon and a frost, but this year will deliver the world, nor heed the cost. We'll soon be joyous friskers, our banners in the breeze; we feel it in our whiskers, we feel it in our knees." The butcher and the baker go beaming through the town; the village undertaker has ceased to wear a frown; the prominent physicians, while amputating limbs, discuss improved conditions, and act like Sunny Jims. And e'en the sad-eyed granger, that man of wrath and bile, who is to joy a stranger, shows symptoms of a smile. Despondent, weary always, he says, "We're coming through; I feel it in my galways, and in my sideboards, too." Chiropodists are saying, these bright and sunny morns, that they are busy flaying the most expensive corns. The new year is a blessing, it speaks of better things, it comes along caressing, with healing in its wings. With faith like this prevailing, we'll see the better day, the weeping and the wailing must shortly die away.
